

RICHARD STRAUSS

SALOME

CONDUCTOR
Johannes Debus
DEBUT

PRODUCTION
Jürgen Flimm

SET AND COSTUME DESIGNER
Santo Loquasto

LIGHTING DESIGNER
James F. Ingalls

CHOREOGRAPHER
Doug Varone

GENERAL MANAGER
Peter Gelb

MUSIC DIRECTOR EMERITUS
James Levine

PRINCIPAL CONDUCTOR
Fabio Luisi

Opera in one act

Based on Hedwig Lachmann's translation of Oscar Wilde's drama, adapted by the composer

Monday, December 5, 2016
8:00–9:40PM

First time this season

The production of Salome was made possible by a generous gift from the Gramma Fisher Foundation, Marshalltown, Iowa

Additional funding for this production was received from Mr. and Mrs. Sid R. Bass, Agnes Varis and Karl Leichtman, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra K. Zilkha, and
The Gilbert S. Kahn and John J. Noffo Kahn
Endowment Fund

The Metropolitan Opera

2016-17 SEASON

The 158th Metropolitan Opera performance of
RICHARD STRAUSS'S

SALOME

CONDUCTOR
Johannes Debus DEBUT

IN ORDER OF VOCAL APPEARANCE

NARRABOTH
Kang Wang DEBUT

HERODIAS
Nancy Fabiola Herrera

THE PAGE
Carolyn Sproule

FIRST JEW
Allan Glassman*

FIRST SOLDIER
Nicholas Brownlee
DEBUT

SECOND JEW
Mark Schowalter

SECOND SOLDIER
Richard Bernstein

THIRD JEW
Noah Baetge

JOCHANAAN
Željko Lučić

FOURTH JEW
Alex Richardson

A CAPPADOCIAN
John Hancock

FIFTH JEW
David Crawford

SALOME
Patricia Racette

FIRST NAZARENE
Mikhail Petrenko

A SLAVE
Kathryn Day

SECOND NAZARENE
Paul Corona

HEROD
Gerhard Siegel

EXECUTIONER
Reginald Braithwaite

This performance is being broadcast live on Metropolitan Opera Radio on SiriusXM channel 74 and streamed at metopera.org.

Monday, December 5, 2016, 8:00-9:40PM

A scene from Strauss's Salome

Musical Preparation Donna Racik, John Keenan, Robert Morrison, and Jonathan C. Kelly
Assistant Stage Directors Gregory Keller and Stephen Pickover
German Coach Marianne Barrett
Prompter Donna Racik
Met Titles Christopher Bergen
Associate Set Designer David Swayze
Associate Costume Designer Mitchell Bloom
Scenery, properties, and electrical props constructed and painted in Metropolitan Opera Shops
Costumes executed by Metropolitan Opera Costume
Department and Werner Russold, Toronto
Wigs and Makeup executed by Metropolitan Opera
Wig and Makeup Department

* Graduate of the
Lindemann Young Artist
Development Program

 Member of the
Lindemann Young Artist
Development Program

Yamaha is the Official Piano of the Metropolitan Opera.

Latecomers will not be admitted during the performance.

This performance is made possible in part by public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts.

Before the performance begins, please switch off cell phones and other electronic devices.

Visit metopera.org

Met Titles

To activate, press the red button to the right of the screen in front of your seat and follow the instructions provided. To turn off the display, press the red button once again. If you have questions, please ask an usher at intermission.

PHOTO: KRISTIAN SCHULLER/METROPOLITAN OPERA

KAIJA SAARIAHO / LIBRETTO BY AMIN MAALOUF

L'AMOUR DE LOIN

DEC 1, 6, 10mat, 14, 17eve, 21, 24mat, 29

The Metropolitan Opera presents the New York premiere of one of the most acclaimed operas of recent years, Kaija Saariaho's mesmerizing L'Amour de Loin, in a spellbinding new production by Robert Lepage. Susanna Mälkki conducts.

Tickets from $27

metopera.org

Synopsis

At King Herod's palace, the young captain Narraboth admires the princess Salome, who sits at the banquet table with her stepfather, Herod, and his court. A page warns Narraboth that terrible things might happen if he continues to stare at the princess. The voice of Jochanaan is heard from the cistern, where he is kept prisoner, proclaiming the coming of the Messiah, and two soldiers comment on the prophet's kindness and Herod's fear of him.

Salome enters, disgusted with Herod's advances toward her and bored by his guests. Jochanaan's voice is heard again, cursing the sinful life of Salome's mother, Herodias. Salome asks about the prophet. The soldiers refuse to let her speak with him, but Narraboth, unable to resist her, orders that Jochanaan be brought forth from the cistern. At first terrified by his appearance, Salome quickly becomes fascinated with Jochanaan's body, asking him to let her touch his hair, his skin, and finally his lips. Jochanaan rejects her forcefully. Narraboth, who can't bear to see Salome's desire for another man, stabs himself. Salome doesn't notice. Beside herself with excitement, she continues to beg for Jochanaan's kiss. The prophet tells her to save herself by seeking Christ and retreats into the cistern, cursing Salome.

Herod appears from the palace, looking for the princess and commenting on the strange look of the moon. When he slips in Narraboth's blood, he suddenly panics and has hallucinations. Herodias angrily dismisses his fantasies and asks him to go back inside with her, but Herod's attentions are now focused on Salome. He offers her food and wine, but she rejects his advances. From the cistern, Jochanaan resumes his tirades against Herodias, who demands that Herod turn the prophet over to the Jews. Herod refuses, maintaining that Jochanaan is a holy man who has seen God. His words spark an argument among the Jews about the true nature of God, and two Nazarenes talk about the miracles of Jesus. As Jochanaan continues to accuse her, Herodias demands that he be silenced.

Herod asks Salome to dance for him. She refuses, but when he promises to give her anything she wants, she makes him swear to keep his word, and agrees. Ignoring her mother's pleas to stop, Salome dances seductively for her stepfather. Herod's delight turns to horror when Salome asks for her reward—the head of Jochanaan on a silver platter. Herod instead offers her riches, half of his kingdom, even the holy curtain of the temple, but Salome won't be dissuaded and insists he fulfill his oath. Herod finally relents, and as the executioner descends into the cistern, Salome anxiously awaits her prize. The prophet's head is brought to her, and she passionately addresses Jochanaan, finally kissing his lips. Herod, terrified and disgusted, orders his soldiers to kill Salome.

PHOTO: KEN HOWARD/MET OPERA

VERDI

NABUCCO

DEC 12, 16, 19, 22, 27, 30 JAN 3, 7 mat

Plácido Domingo brings another new baritone role to the Met under the baton of James Levine. Liudmyla Monastyrska is Abigaille, Jamie Barton is Fenena, and Dmitri Belosselskiy is Zaccaria.

Tickets from $27

metopera.org

Richard Strauss

Salome

Premiere: Dresden Court Opera, 1905

Richard Strauss was catapulted to international fame and notoriety with this incendiary and powerful opera. The story is derived from a brief, stark account in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew: a young princess of Judea dances for her stepfather Herod and chooses as her reward the head of the prophet John the Baptist. This subject captured the imaginations of many visual artists, from Botticelli (1488) to Gustave Doré (1865), but the full possibilities of the tale were perhaps best realized in Oscar Wilde's tragedy (1891). Originally conceived as a star vehicle for the great actress Sarah Bernhardt, Wilde's play boldly merged the story's latent themes of erotica, dementia, necrophilia, and religious inspiration. It was banned from public performance in several countries. To realize Wilde's vision as an opera, Strauss created a vast orchestral canvas built around a title role of gargantuan vocal, dramatic, and physical demands. That said, Strauss's score is honed into a single musical and dramatic sweep of slightly more than an hour and a half. The result is a work with the grandeur of Wagner's epics told with the focus and emotional punch of the short Italian verismo operas. Salome's first audiences were not only appalled by the depraved story unfolding on the stage but also by the harsh sounds of the orchestra (which are matched by moments of intense beauty). Salome is a rare instance of a succès de scandale that retains all the vitality of its initial appearance.

The Creators

Richard Strauss (1864–1949) composed an impressive body of orchestral works and songs before turning to opera. After two early failures, Salome caused a theatrical sensation, and the balance of his long career was largely dedicated to the stage, with Elektra, Der Rosenkavalier, and Ariadne auf Naxos among the high points of his output. Oscar Wilde (1854–1900), the Irish novelist, poet, and playwright, was one of the defining characters of the Victorian era. Strauss used a German translation of Wilde's play by Hedwig Lachmann (1865–1918), an author and poet who also translated works by Edgar Allan Poe, Honoré de Balzac, and Rabindranath Tagore.

The Setting

The action takes place outside the palace of King Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee, in the early first century AD. The present production places the scene in a non-specific contemporary setting.

The Music

From the opening measure, featuring two clarinets slithering up the scale, the score announces itself as exotic, iconoclastic, and thoroughly compelling. Much of the work's magic comes from the orchestra pit: Strauss indicated an orchestra of 105, including an organ, castanets, xylophone, harmonium, and heckelphon (a lower-ranged member of the oboe family that was invented the year before Salome premiered). The famous "Dance of the Seven Veils" occurs about two-thirds of the way through the opera and is also frequently performed as a set piece in concerts. Most of the orchestra's other notable passages are more integrated into the surrounding score than the dance, but are no less memorable. The first appearance of Jochanaan (John the Baptist) from his cistern dungeon is an orchestral sunburst—we hear him breathing in a moment of freedom and renewed life. The moment when Salome waits for his beheading sounds supremely creepy: four double basses pinch a note between thumb and forefinger while hitting the string with their bows. Yet for all the wonder in the orchestra, the opera is uniquely demanding on the singers: the leaps and bounds of Herod's vocal line convey mental derangement. Jochanaan's brief appearances convince us of his ability to inspire both erotic and religious passion. But it is the title role that makes or breaks this opera: her lines stretch from the highest to the lowest ranges of the female voice, working with and sometimes against the huge orchestra. In its musical and dramatic challenges, it stands as one of the most demanding roles in opera.

Met History

The Met premiere of Salome in 1907, presented at the end of the evening after a long concert of operatic highlights, was a historic occasion for several reasons. The great Wagnerian diva Olive Fremstad took the title role, and the glittering audience included Giacomo Puccini (who remained fascinated, if baffled, by the work throughout his life). Many of those present recognized the revolutionary grandeur of the music, but the opera itself was deemed so morally and musically outrageous by critics and key Met board members that it was withdrawn after that single performance. Salome returned to the repertory in 1934 and was performed several times throughout the next decade. The opera was a sensation in 1949 with the Bulgarian soprano Ljuba Welitsch in the title role. Through the end of the 1950s it was standard to perform Salome as part of a double bill, with the most frequent (if unlikely) partner piece being Puccini's Gianni Schicchi. After Welitsch, notable interpreters of the title role at the Met have included Inge Borkh (1958), Birgit Nilsson (1965–66), Leonie Rysanek (1972–77), Grace Bumbry (1973–81), Hildegard Behrens (1990), and Catherine Malfitano (1996). Among the remarkable conductors to have led performances have been Dimitri Mitropoulos, Karl Böhm, Erich Leinsdorf, and James Levine. The current production by Jürgen Flimm premiered in 2004, with Valery Gergiev conducting Karita Mattila as Salome.

Program Note

From Botticelli in the 15th century and Dürer in the 16th to Picasso and Klimt in the 20th, painters have been fascinated by the personality of Salome. But before Richard Strauss came along in the early years of the 20th century, only Alessandro Stradella with his San Giovanni Battista (1675) and Jules Massenet with his Hérodiade (1881) had dealt on a large musical scale with the biblical story of the young princess whose dancing so pleased her stepfather, Herod Antipas, that he promised her any reward she might care to name. Prompted by her mother, Herodias, she asked for the head of the itinerant evangelist John the Baptist. He had been imprisoned by Herod for his blasphemous claim to be preparing the way for God's appearance on earth, and for his denunciation of Herodias's marriage to Herod as "incestuous" (because her first husband, Salome's father, was Herod's half-brother). Herod, though reluctant to grant his stepdaughter's bloodthirsty request, kept his promise. The executioner, St. Mark records, "brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother."

This is as far as the biblical narrative (which never names Salome) takes us. Oscar Wilde's play Salomé, written in French in 1891–92 as a vehicle for Sarah Bernhardt and published with the celebrated illustrations by Aubrey Beardsley, improved on the legend by introducing the motif of sexual obsession—Salome's for John and Herod's for her—and by inventing Herod's order that Salome should be killed by his soldiers, rather as one might put down a mad dog. Wilde's interest reflected that of several 19th-century writers, who found in the subject elements of religio-eroticism more in tune with the spirit of the time than the usual biblical themes. In addition, Wilde had a detailed knowledge of paintings of Salome. Only those by Gustave Moreau fully satisfied him. "Her lust must needs be infinite, and her perversity without limits," was Wilde's view. "Her pearls must expire on her flesh."

Wilde's play, banned in England, was first staged in 1896 in Paris, while its author was in jail. The first German production took place in Breslau in 1901, in a translation by one "Dr. Kisper." Another German translation, by Hedwig Lachmann, was sent to Richard Strauss by the young Viennese writer Anton Lindner, who offered to convert it into an opera libretto. Strauss asked for some sample scenes but was not impressed by them. He had already detected operatic possibilities in Lachmann's text as it stood. The opening line, "Wie schön ist die Prinzessin Salome heute Nacht!" ("How beautiful the Princess Salome is tonight"), immediately suggested music to him. His copy of the translation contains musical ideas jotted down hastily alongside crucial lines. When he eventually saw the play on the stage in Berlin (where he was conductor of the Court Opera) in November of 1902, in Max Reinhardt's production of Lachmann's translation, he had already made a number of sketches for an opera. Salome was played by the great actress Gertrud Eysoldt, whose striking performance was immortalized in Lovis Corinth's well-known painting.

Strauss shortened the Wilde–Lachmann text by about one third, eliminating some subsidiary episodes and reducing the floridity of the imagery. He also significantly shifted the balance of the play. Wilde’s central character was Herod. Strauss’s, indisputably, is Salome—“a 16-year-old princess with the voice of Isolde,” he called her. He completed the musical sketch during his 1904 summer holiday and finished the full score on June 20, 1905. The last part to be written was the Dance of the Seven Veils, often decried as the weakest feature of the opera, but more justly defined as a brilliantly effective, self-contained tone-poem, its music wheedling, kittenish, teasing, and ultimately demoniacal, as Strauss lashes the waltz rhythm into a frenzy.

Strauss awarded the first performance to Dresden, where the conductor Ernst von Schuch had earned Strauss’s gratitude for the successful launching of his satirical opera Feuersnot in 1901. The composer warned Schuch that the singers of the three principal roles of Salome, Herod, and Jochanaan (the Hebrew name for John the Baptist) would need three months to learn their parts. He had misgivings about the casting of Dresden’s buxom Wagnerian soprano Marie Wittich as the slim, youthful Salome, but decided that the vocal demands of the role overrode the visual. At the first piano rehearsal, all except one of the singers returned their parts in protest to the conductor. The exception was Czech tenor Carl Burrian (Herod), who already knew his by heart. This shamed his colleagues into reluctant action. Later, when Wittich realized the full extent of the “perversities” the director had devised for her, she threatened to go on strike, protesting, “I won’t do it, I’m a decent woman.” As a result, Strauss informed Schuch that he would reserve the first performance for him only until December 9. After that, Arthur Nikisch in Leipzig or Gustav Mahler in Vienna could have it. The premiere was given on the deadline-date and was an overwhelming success: the audience demanded 38 curtain calls. But the critics abused it as immoral and cacophonous.

The so-called “immorality” of Salome led to censorship problems in several countries. Strauss was bluffing Schuch because, although Mahler was anxious to conduct the opera in Vienna, his intention had provoked a warning shot from the Court Opera censor as early as September of 1905. But Mahler persevered resolutely; after reading the score, he wrote to Strauss: “Every note is right! ... I shall leave no stone unturned and shall never flag in championing this incomparable, thoroughly original masterpiece.” Mahler first saw Salome in Berlin in 1907, when he attended two performances within a few days. “One of the greatest masterpieces of our time,” he wrote to his wife. “It is the voice of the ‘earth-spirit’ speaking from the heart of genius.” This was Mahler’s way of saying that he recognized that the opera’s subject was sex. But the censors denied him the chance to conduct it (its first Vienna performance, by a visiting company from Breslau, was given in 1907 at a theater not under the court censor’s control). At one point Mahler hinted to Strauss that he might threaten to resign his directorship of the Court Opera over Salome, which brought the noble response: “We need an artist of your determination, your genius and your outlook in such a position too badly for you to put anything at stake on Salome’s account. In the end we shall attain our ends without this!” Salome was not performed at the Vienna State Opera until 1918.

Strauss’s employer in Berlin, Kaiser Wilhelm II, remarked that Salome would do its composer harm. Strauss’s famous retort—that the “harm” enabled him to build his villa in Garmisch—betrays how successful the opera was, both as a coruscating and sensational score and as a succès de scandale. Even today, when our sensitivities have been blunted by far worse horrors than the desire of a depraved girl to kiss the mouth of a decapitated prophet, Salome has the power to shock and sicken an audience, not only because of its uncanny translation into music of Wilde’s fin de siècle decadence, but through the graphic and atmospheric magnetism of Strauss’s marvelous score. It gives the impression of having been composed in one sustained burst of invention, although structurally it is divided into the sections of a symphonic poem.

Dramatically, the opera is superbly paced, rising to the climax of Salome’s final solo, in which all the melodic themes and fragments are drawn together in an orgasmic expression of mounting desire and madness. It is easy to believe that, as has been suggested, this scene was composed first and that the rest of the one-act opera grew from it. Yet it is not Salome’s opera alone. The music for Herod, Herodias, and Jochanaan is almost as starkly characterized, while over the whole score, like the moonlight in which the action takes place, a nocturnal luminosity is shed by the masterful orchestration.

The orchestra is, in a real sense, the protagonist in Salome. Although over 100 instruments are required, Strauss only occasionally unleashes their full capacity. Much of the score is light, transparent, and subtly colored. His advice that it should be played “like fairy music by Mendelssohn” is a valuable hint to interpreters. The virtuosity of the scoring of this “scherzo with a fatal conclusion,” in Strauss’s own words, is dazzling, from the clarinet’s opening roulade to the grinding final chords that underline the horror of Salome’s violent death. The famous passage for “pinched” high double-bass notes as Salome sighs with anguish while waiting for Jochanaan’s head is but one of numerous loci classici of Strauss’s ability to create sounds that exactly mirror the dramatic situation. It is the orchestra, like a stream of consciousness, that tells us what is in the characters’ minds and hearts even before they know it themselves. Just one example: when Salome’s sexual obsession for Jochanaan becomes murderous, the orchestra converts (by distortion) the theme of her longing to kiss his mouth into that of her demand for his head on a silver charger.

—Michael Kennedy

The Cast

Johannes Debus

CONDUCTOR (SPEYER, GERMANY)

THIS SEASON Salome for his debut at the Met, and Ariodante, Götterdämmerung, and Somers's Louis Riel with the Canadian Opera Company.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS He has been Music Director of the Canadian Opera Company since 2009, where he has led a wide range of repertoire, from Il Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda to Le Nozze di Figaro to Falstaff, from Tristan und Isolde to Rusalka to Erwartung. He spent the previous ten years at the Frankfurt Opera, where he served as pianist, coach, assistant conductor, and eventually resident conductor. He returned to Frankfurt in 2016 to conduct The Cunning Little Vixen. He conducts regularly at the Bavarian State Opera and Berlin Staatsoper, and he has made guest appearances with the Boston Symphony, Cleveland Orchestra, English National Opera, and Opéra National de Lyon, and at the Tanglewood, Lincoln Center, and Spoleto festivals, among many others.

Nancy Fabiola Herrera

MEZZO-SOPRANO (CANARY ISLANDS, SPAIN)

THIS SEASON Herodias in Salome, Fenena in Nabucco, and Maddalena in Rigoletto at the Met, and Léonor de Guzman in La Favorite in Las Palmas, Spain.

MET APPEARANCES The title role of Carmen and Suzuki in Madama Butterfly (debut, 2005).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Recent performances include Carmen with Opera Australia, for her debut at Moscow's Bolshoi Theatre, and at Mexico's Teatro del Estado; Sara in Roberto Devereux for her debut at Moscow's Tchaikovsky Concert Hall; Dalila in Samson et Dalila with Opera Oviedo; and Paula in Daniel Catán's Florencia en el Amazonas at the LA Opera. She has also sung Carmen at the Bavarian State Opera, Arena di Verona, Semperoper Dresden, and LA Opera, as well as Charlotte in Werther in Oviedo, Donna Rosa in Daniel Catán's Il Postino in Madrid, and de Falla's La Vida Breve with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Toronto Philharmonic, and Philadelphia Orchestra. Additional performances include the world premiere of Il Postino with the LA Opera, Giovanna Seymour in Anna Bolena in Barcelona, and Isabella in L'Italiana in Algeri in Las Palmas.

Patricia Racette

SOPRANO (MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE)

THIS SEASON The title role of Salome and Roxane in Cyrano de Bergerac at the Met, and Salome at the Pittsburgh Opera and LA Opera.

MET APPEARANCES Eighteen roles, including Nedda in Pagliacci, the title role of Tosca, Maddalena in Andrea Chénier, Leonora in Il Trovatore, Madame Lidoine in Dialogues des Carmélites, Cio-Cio-San in Madama Butterfly, Musetta (debut, 1995) and Mimi in La Bohème, Ellen Orford in Peter Grimes, Roberta in the world premiere of Tobias Picker's An American Tragedy, Violetta in La Traviata, and the three leading soprano roles in Il Trittico.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS World premieres include the title role of Picker's Dolores Claiborne at the San Francisco Opera, Leslie Crosbie in Paul Moravec's The Letter and the title role in Picker's Emmeline at the Santa Fe Opera, and Love Simpson in Floyd's Cold Sassy Tree with Houston Grand Opera. She has also sung the title role of Carlisle Floyd's Susannah at the San Francisco Opera, Magda in La Rondine with the LA Opera, Liù in Turandot and Madame Lidoine with Lyric Opera of Chicago, the title roles of Iphigénie en Tauride and Jenůfa with Washington National Opera, and Cio-Cio-San for her debut with the Canadian Opera Company.

Kang Wang

TENOR (HARBIN, CHINA)

THIS SEASON Narraboth in Salome for his house debut and First Prisoner in Fidelio at the Met.

MET APPEARANCES He made his company debut as part of the 2016 Summer Recital Series.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Elvino in a MET+Juilliard production of La Sonnambula, Nathanaël in Les Contes d'Hoffmann and the Notary in Don Pasquale with OperAvenir in Switzerland, and Don José in La Tragedie de Carmen at the International Vocal Arts Institute in Virginia. He placed second in The Dallas Opera Guild 2016 Vocal Competition and won the People's Choice Award. He also won the People's Choice Award in the Dame Joan Sutherland Award Competition and the 2014 Clonter Opera Prize in the UK. He is a member of the Met's Lindemann Young Artist Development Program.

Stream Hundreds of Met Performances on Your Favorite Devices

NOW AVAILABLE: All three of Sondra Radvanovsky's 2015-16
Tudor Queen performances

Free Apps for Android™, iPad, Roku®, and Samsung Smart TV Available!

Met Opera on Demand delivers instant and unlimited online access to more than 600 full-length Met performances—including nearly 100 stunning high-definition presentations from the award-winning Live in HD series, along with classic telecasts and radio broadcasts from 1935 to 2016.

Experience these extraordinary Met performances on your TV, tablet, smartphone, or computer. Download the apps for free, and visit the Met website to subscribe or sign up for a free 7-day trial.

metoperaondemand.org

ROKU SAMSUNG

PHOTO: KEN HOWARD/METROPOLITAN OPERA
APPLE, THE APPLE LOGO, AND IPAD ARE TRADEMARKS OF APPLE INC., REGISTERED IN THE U.S. AND OTHER COUNTRIES.
APP STORE IS A SERVICE MARK OF APPLE INC. ANDROID IS TRADEMARK OF GOOGLE INC.
ROKU IS A REGISTERED TRADEMARK OF ROKU, INC. IN THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER COUNTRIES.

Željko Lučić

BARITONE (ZRENJANIN, SERBIA)

THIS SEASON Jochanaan in Salome, the title roles of Nabucco and Rigoletto, and the 50th Anniversary Gala at the Met, the title role of Falstaff in Frankfurt, Rigoletto at the Paris Opera and in Dresden, and Iago in Otello at Covent Garden and in Zurich.

MET APPEARANCES Iago, Scarpia in Tosca, the title role of Macbeth, Amonasro in Aida, Count di Luna in Il Trovatore, Michele in Il Tabarro, Barnaba in La Gioconda (debut, 2006), Germont in La Traviata, and Gérard in Andrea Chénier.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS He has sung Gérard at Covent Garden; Renato in Un Ballo in Maschera, Amonasro, and Germont at La Scala; Scarpia and Nabucco at the Vienna State Opera; Iago in Zurich; the title role of Falstaff in Frankfurt; Rigoletto at the San Francisco Opera, Lyric Opera of Chicago, and La Scala; and the title role of Simon Boccanegra and Macbeth at the Bavarian State Opera. He has also sung Nabucco with Lyric Opera of Chicago, Michele and the title role of Gianni Schicchi in Frankfurt, Count di Luna at Covent Garden, Macbeth at the Salzburg Festival, Don Carlo in Ernani with the San Francisco Opera, and Germont at the Vienna State Opera, Covent Garden, and Paris Opera.

Gerhard Siegel

TENOR (TROTBERG, GERMANY)

THIS SEASON Herod in Salome at the Met, the Vienna State Opera, and in Stuttgart; Mime in Wagner's Ring cycle in Dresden, Tokyo, Budapest, and Odense, Denmark; and Tristan in Tristan und Isolde in Gelsenkirchen, Germany.

MET APPEARANCES Mime (debut, 2004) and the Captain in Wozzeck.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Herod in Brussels, Montpellier, and at the Vienna State Opera and Berlin Staatsoper; Mime at the Bayreuth Festival, Covent Garden, and in Barcelona and Cologne; Bacchus in Ariadne auf Naxos at the Vienna State Opera; Shuisky in Boris Godunov at the Bavarian State Opera; the Captain at the Paris Opera, Lyric Opera of Chicago, in Stuttgart, and at Madrid's Teatro Real; Max in Der Freischütz at Berlin's Komische Oper; and Florestan in Fidelio at the Granada Festival. He has also sung the title role of Tannhäuser in Augsburg, Max in Jonny Spielt Auf in Cologne, the title role of Siegfried and Walther in Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg at the Nürnberg State Theatre, Sellem in The Rake's Progress at the Theater an der Wien, Alwa in Lulu in Geneva and Madrid, and Schoenberg's Gurrelieder on tour with the SWR Symphony Orchestra.

Facilities and Services

THE ARNOLD AND MARIE SCHWARTZ GALLERY MET

Art gallery located in the South Lobby featuring leading artists. Open Monday through Friday, 6pm through last intermission; Saturday, noon through last intermission of evening performances.

ASSISTIVE LISTENING SYSTEM AND BINOCULARS

Wireless headsets, which work with the FM assistive listening system to amplify sound, are available at the coat check station on the South Concourse level before performances. Binoculars are also available for rental at the coat check station on the South Concourse level. The rental cost is $5. A major credit card or driver's license is required as deposit.

BLIND AND VISUALLY IMPAIRED

Large print programs are available free of charge from the ushers. Braille synopses of many operas are available free of charge. Please contact an usher. Tickets for no-view score desk seats may be purchased by calling the Metropolitan Opera Guild at 212-769-7028.

BOX OFFICE

Monday–Saturday, 10am–8pm; Sunday, noon–6pm. The Box Office closes at 8pm on non-performance evenings or on evenings with no intermission. Box Office Information: 212-362-6000.

CHECK ROOM

On Concourse level (Founders Hall).

FIRST AID

Doctor in attendance during performances; contact an usher for assistance.

LECTURE SERIES

Opera-related courses, pre-performance lectures, master classes, and more are held throughout the performance season at the Opera Learning Center. For tickets and information, call 212-769-7028.

LOST AND FOUND

Security office at Stage Door. Monday–Friday, 2pm–4pm; 212-799-3100, ext. 2499.

MET OPERA SHOP

The Met Opera Shop is adjacent to the North Box Office, 212-580-4090. Open Monday–Saturday, 10am–final intermission; Sunday, noon–6pm.

PUBLIC TELEPHONES

Telephones with volume controls and TTY Public Telephone located in Founders Hall on the Concourse level.

RESTAURANT AND REFRESHMENT FACILITIES

The Grand Tier Restaurant features creative contemporary American cuisine, and the Revlon Bar offers panini, crostini, and a full service bar. Both are open two hours prior to the Met Opera curtain time to any Lincoln Center ticket holder for pre-curtain dining. Pre-ordered intermission dining is also available for Met ticket holders. For reservations please call 212-799-3400.

RESTROOMS

Wheelchair-accessible restrooms are on the Dress Circle, Grand Tier, Parterre, and Founders Hall levels.

SEAT CUSHIONS

Available in the South Check Room. Major credit card or driver's license required for deposit.

SCHOOL PARTNERSHIPS

For information contact the Metropolitan Opera Guild Education Department, 212-769-7022.

SCORE-DESK TICKET PROGRAM

Tickets for score desk seats in the Family Circle boxes may be purchased by calling the Met Opera Guild at 212-769-7028. These no-view seats provide an affordable way for music students to study an opera's score during a live performance.

TOUR GUIDE SERVICE

Backstage tours of the Opera House are held during the Met season on most weekdays at 3:15pm, and on select Sundays at 10:30am and/or 1:30pm. For tickets and information, call 212-769-7028. Tours of Lincoln Center daily; call 212-875-5351 for availability.

WEBSITE

www.metopera.org

WHEELCHAIR ACCOMMODATIONS

Telephone 212-799-3100, ext. 2204. Wheelchair entrance at Concourse level.

The exits indicated by a red light and the sign nearest the seat you occupy are the shortest routes to the street. In the event of fire or other emergency, please do not run—walk to that exit.

In compliance with New York City Department of Health regulations, smoking is prohibited in all areas of this theater.

Patrons are reminded that in deference to the performing artists and the seated audience, those who leave the auditorium during the performance will not be readmitted while the performance is in progress.

The photographing or sound recording of any performance, or the possession of any device for such photographing or sound recording inside this theater, without the written permission of the management, is prohibited by law. Offenders may be ejected and liable for damages and other lawful remedies.

Use of cellular telephones and electronic devices for any purpose, including email and texting, is prohibited in the auditorium at all times. Please be sure to turn off all devices before entering the auditorium.