A TIMELESS STORY OF LOVE, YEARNING, AND THE TRAGIC CONSEQUENCES of youthful pride, Eugene Onegin holds the dual honor of being one of the most beloved works of both Russian opera and Russian literature. Tchaikovsky’s expressive lyricism gives a fitting voice to the emotional turmoil at the heart of Alexander Pushkin’s famous verse novel. Pushkin’s stature in Russian literature can only be compared to Shakespeare’s in the English canon, and the opera represents a fortuitous meeting of two of Russia’s great creative minds. With roughly half a century separating them, Tchaikovsky stands as the tortured creator of highly personal, semi-autobiographical works of art while Pushkin is the sly and subversive social critic. But it is these differences that make the operatic version of Eugene Onegin so thrilling: it’s both a kaleidoscopic portrait of Russian society and a philosophical reflection on the human condition.

Deborah Warner’s Met production places the action in the late 19th century, around the time of the opera’s premiere and several decades after Pushkin’s own setting in the 1820s. This shift emphasizes the autumnal quality of aristocratic life at the end of Russia’s imperial age, highlighting the sharp divisions between country life, rural gentry, and aristocratic St. Petersburg, and the bleak and constrained futures of its characters.

This guide will introduce students to the Golden Age of Russian literature and Tchaikovsky’s achievement in adapting one of its most beloved works into an opera of Romantic melancholy and melodic sweep. By comparing Tchaikovsky’s libretto to Pushkin’s verse novel and considering the different approaches of composer, poet, and translator, students will gain an understanding of what makes Eugene Onegin a remarkable and moving opera. They will also explore the challenges of cross-form adaptation and the innovations in both Tchaikovsky’s and Pushkin’s work. The activities on the following pages are designed to provide context, deepen background knowledge, and enrich the overall experience of this Live in HD transmission. This guide will also align with key strands of the Common Core Standards.
The activities in this guide will focus on several aspects of Eugene Onegin:
- The relationship between Tchaikovsky’s libretto and Pushkin’s verse novel
- Tchaikovsky’s musical style and his representation of Pushkin’s poetry
- The psychological evolution of the opera’s characters
- Creative choices made by the artists of the Metropolitan Opera for this production
- The opera as a unified work of art, involving the efforts of composer, librettist, and Met artists

This guide is intended to cultivate students’ interest in Eugene Onegin, whether or not they have any prior acquaintance with opera. It includes activities for students with a wide range of musical backgrounds, and seeks to encourage them to think about opera—and the performing arts as a whole—as a medium of both entertainment and creative expression.
SUMMARY Eugene Onegin, a worldly but arrogant young man, visits the home of two young sisters in the Russian countryside. The older sister, Tatiana, immediately falls in love with him and, in a fit of passion, writes him a letter confessing her feelings. Onegin humiliates Tatiana by refusing her and suggesting that she learn to control her emotions. A few months later, Onegin angers his best friend, the poet Lenski, by idly flirting with Olga, Tatiana’s sister and the object of Lenski’s affection. Onegin and Lenski fight a duel and Lenski is killed.

Several years later, Onegin returns to St. Petersburg after traveling abroad. While at a party, he is introduced to the young wife of Prince Gremin and is shocked to realize that the stylish, beautiful woman is the same Tatiana whose love he once refused. Onegin suddenly realizes that he is indeed in love with Tatiana and later, at the Prince’s palace, asks her to run away with him. Tatiana tells Onegin that while she still loves him, she has made her choice and will not abandon her husband. Onegin is left alone and devastated.

THE SOURCE: EUGENE ONEGIN BY ALEXANDER PUSHKIN Alexander Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin, a novel in verse, is one of the most celebrated works in all of Russian literature. It is a wonder of formal innovation as well as a work of stunning social and psychological insight. The witticism of the verse and complicated structure of its rhyme scheme belie the seriousness of the novel’s investigation into the nature of young love and unfulfilled longing.

Tchaikovsky—who was profoundly sensitive to poetry—adapted the novel into an operatic libretto himself, with help from a friend, the amateur poet Konstantin Shilovsky. Some portions of the opera, most notably the famous letter scene, preserve Pushkin’s text in an almost unaltered state. Although the libretto omits large sections of the novel, it remains true to the episodic nature of Pushkin’s narrative: Tchaikovsky called his opera “lyric scenes.”

SYNOPSIS

ACT I: The Larin estate in rural Russia Madame Larina listens as her daughters, Tatiana and Olga, sing a song about young lovers meeting in the woods. She reminisces with the girls’ aging nurse, Filippyevna, about bygone years and the romantic ideals of her youth.
Since the early 19th century, singing voices have usually been classified in six basic types, three male and three female, according to their range:

SOPRANO
the highest-pitched type of human voice, normally possessed only by women and boys

MEZZO-SOPRANO
the female voice whose range lies between the soprano and the contralto (Italian "mezzo" = middle, medium)

CONTRALTO
the lowest female voice, also called an alto

COUNTertenor
a male singing voice whose vocal range is equivalent to that of a contralto, mezzo-soprano, or (less frequently) a soprano, usually through use of falsetto

TENOR
the highest naturally occurring voice type in adult males

BARITONE
the male voice lying below the tenor and above the bass

BASS
the lowest male voice

Their conversation is interrupted by a group of peasants who have finished their daily work and sing for the Larin family. Olga, who has a spirited and flirtatious nature, teases Tatiana, who is quiet and romantic, for living in a dreamland, and prepares excitedly for a visit from her fiancé, the poet Lenski. When Lenski arrives with a friend, Eugene Onegin, Tatiana is immediately taken with the visitor.

Later that night, Tatiana worries Filippyevna with her restlessness. Tatiana assures the nurse she is fine, but stays awake thinking about Onegin. Acting on an impulse, she writes him a letter confessing the true nature of her feelings and enlists Filippyevna’s help to deliver it.

When Onegin and Tatiana meet again, he tells her that he was touched by her letter but can only offer her friendship. He warns her to guard her emotions more carefully. Tatiana is humiliated.

ACT II: The Larin estate A few months later, Lenksi and Onegin return to the Larin estate to celebrate Tatiana’s name day. Annoyed that Lenski has dragged him to a large party he would rather have avoided, Onegin takes his revenge by flirting brazenly with Olga. Lenski is enraged and challenges Onegin to a duel, ending the party.

While waiting for Onegin to arrive for their duel, Lenski thinks about his poetry, death, and his love for Olga. Onegin arrives late, and although both men would rather avoid violence, their honor compels them to fight. Lenski is shot and killed.

ACT III: St. Petersburg Several years have passed, and Onegin has returned from traveling abroad. He is bored by his surroundings, lonely, and still consumed with guilt over Lenski’s death. At a ball at Prince Gremin’s palace, the prince tells his friend Onegin how much joy his young wife has brought into his life. Onegin is stunned to recognize the elegant, confident woman as Tatiana. She is taken aback by Onegin’s presence, but greets him politely before quickly leaving the party. Onegin suddenly realizes he is in love with Tatiana.

Onegin writes to Tatiana. When they meet, he asks her to run away with him. Tatiana admits that she still loves Onegin, but tells him that she cannot abandon her husband. She leaves Onegin alone and devastated.
WHO’S WHO IN EUGENE ONEGIN

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CHARACTER</th>
<th>PRONUNCIATION</th>
<th>VOICE TYPE</th>
<th>THE LOWDOWN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tatiana Larina</td>
<td>ta-TYAH-na A young woman from a</td>
<td>soprano</td>
<td>Tatiana’s life has been secluded, and although she is shy and bookish, she is capable of passionate expression and deep attachment.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>country estate</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eugene Onegin</td>
<td>yoo-JEEN oh-NYEH-gin A young</td>
<td>baritone</td>
<td>Disillusioned and aloof, Onegin is dismissive of the world and people around him. His careless attitude will lead him to tragedy and loss.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>aristocrat</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lenski</td>
<td>LEN-skee A young poet and neighbor</td>
<td>tenor</td>
<td>Lenski is earnest, idealistic, and deeply in love with Olga, Tatiana’s sister.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>of the Larin family</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Olga Larina</td>
<td>AWL-guh Tatiana’s younger sister</td>
<td>contralto</td>
<td>More extroverted than her sister, Olga’s innocent flirtation with Onegin ultimately leads to tragedy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prince Gremin</td>
<td>GREH-min A wealthy aristocrat</td>
<td>bass</td>
<td>Gremin is surprised to find love late in life, following a career in the army. He is decent and honorable.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Madame Larina</td>
<td>LAH-ree-na The mother of Tatiana</td>
<td>mezzo-</td>
<td>Madame Larina wants her daughters to marry well but reminisces about the man she loved before her own arranged marriage.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>and Olga</td>
<td>soprano</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filippyevna</td>
<td>fil-eep-YEV-nah The sisters’ aging</td>
<td>mezzo-</td>
<td>Tatiana enlists the loyal Filippyevna’s help to deliver her letter to Onegin.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>nanny</td>
<td>soprano</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1731 With a performance on December 11 of Calandro by Giovanni Ristori, Russian audiences are first exposed to Italian opera. Before this time, there had been no Russian tradition of opera, and instrumental music was still in an early stage of development in comparison to that of Western Europe.

1799 Aleksandr Sergeevich Pushkin is born in Moscow, Russia, to an old, aristocratic family. On his mother’s side, he was a descendant of Abram Hannibal, who was abducted from his African family, eventually adopted by Peter the Great, and elevated as a member of the imperial court. Many scholars consider Pushkin to be Russia’s greatest poet and the founder of modern Russian literature.

1823 Pushkin begins work on the verse novel Eugene Onegin, which he writes and publishes serially through 1832. A detailed and accurate portrait of aristocratic life in tsarist Russia, it becomes one of the most beloved Russian novels of any age.

1836 Mikhail Glinka’s opera A Life for the Tsar premieres at the Bolshoi Theater in St. Petersburg. The work is hailed as the first truly Russian opera, featuring not only a libretto in the Russian language and a story based on the folk hero Ivan Susanin, but the incorporation of folk melodies and other distinctively Russian musical elements.

1837 After witnessing his wife accept the flirtatious behavior of their acquaintance George d’Anthès, Pushkin receives a letter informing him that he has been elected to “The Most Serene Order of Cuckolds.” Pushkin challenges d’Anthès to a duel and is mortally wounded. He dies two days later.

1840 Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky is born on May 7 near Votkinsk, in rural northeastern Russia, to a large middle-class family. Tchaikovsky’s parents encourage his early musical talent by hiring a tutor and purchasing an orchestrion, a type of organ, for their family home. He is also a precocious student of poetry and writes a number of literary works at a young age.
1852 Tchaikovsky is sent to St. Petersburg to attend the School of Jurisprudence with the aim of later pursuing a career in law. While there, he continues his musical education privately, attending concerts, performing in choirs, and writing his first musical compositions.

1859 Upon his graduation from the School of Jurisprudence, Tchaikovsky begins working as a clerk at the Ministry of Justice. He is an avid participant in St. Petersburg’s rich cultural life, attending performances of theater, ballet, opera, and amateur theatrical organizations.

1862 Tchaikovsky matriculates at the newly established St. Petersburg Conservatory, the first academic musical institution in Russia, studying composition, piano, flute, organ, and music theory. As Herman Laroche, one of his classmates at the Conservatory and one of his earliest biographers later claims he told Tchaikovsky, “You are the greatest musical talent in present-day Russia... I see in you the greatest, or, better said, the sole hope of our musical future.”

1866 Tchaikovsky accepts a post to teach music theory at the new Moscow Conservatory. In his personal life, he develops friendships with the homosexuals in his social circle and romantic relationships with a few. Tchaikovsky’s homosexuality is known to his family and close friends, and is a frequent topic of discussion in his correspondence. At the time, he believes that he will eventually be able to have a traditional marriage and looks forward to the comfort of family life and children. (continued on next page)
During a discussion with Tchaikovsky about potential opera libretti, the singer Yelizaveta Lavrovskaya—a fellow professor at the Conservatory—proposes Pushkin’s verse novel Eugene Onegin as a possible source.

While composing at an intense pace, Tchaikovsky is contacted by Antonina Milyukova, a former pupil, who sends him an ardent letter in which she confesses her love for him. Tchaikovsky understands his situation as uniquely similar to that of the characters of Eugene Onegin. He and Antonia marry in July; within two weeks, Tchaikovsky leaves her and they separate permanently two months later. His marriage and the resulting psychological turmoil launch the composer into a period of medical crises, restlessness, and writer’s block.

Tchaikovsky continues work on Eugene Onegin while convalescing in Switzerland and Italy. He completes the opera in January, despite the difficulties of the past months, within only eight months.

The opera premieres in March in a production by students from the Moscow Conservatory at the Maly Theater in Moscow.

Eugene Onegin has its first professional production at Moscow’s Bolshoi Theater in January.
THE SUPERFLUOUS MAN

The character of Eugene Onegin served as a model for later generations of writers who created anti-heroes with similar attributes. Like Onegin, these men tend to be aristocratic and intelligent, but bored, disengaged with the world around them, careless and cynical, and inclined to idle activities such as drinking and gambling.

Over the course of the 19th century, this kind of character became an archetype particular to Russian literature, commonly referred to as the “superfluous man,” after Ivan Turgenev’s The Diary of a Superfluous Man (1850). Other writers who explored the concept include Mikhail Lermontov (A Hero of Our Time, 1840), Ivan Goncharov (Oblomov, 1859), Dostoyevsky, Tolstoy, and Chekhov.
Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music

Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin is a renowned and beloved work of Russian literature with an intricate poetic structure. Tchaikovsky’s task in adapting it was a daunting one, and just as he and his librettist faced difficult interpretive choices in creating their opera, so have an impressive number of translators who have attempted to render Pushkin’s highly idiosyncratic poetry into English.

This activity will introduce students to the creative work of the poetic translator. Students will also consider the relationship between artistic genres and their particular styles of storytelling. What does adapting a story into another format require? What changes must be made? What can be altered without sacrificing the essence of the original work? To explore these questions and more, students will:

- examine the literary attributes of Pushkin’s verse
- compare various translations of the same excerpts from both Pushkin’s novel and Tchaikovsky’s libretto
- listen to and analyze musical excerpts from Eugene Onegin in advance of the Met’s HD transmission
- apply their knowledge by creating a new translation of a stanza of Pushkin’s verse

STEPS

In this activity, students will engage in close reading, analyzing an unfamiliar poem before turning to different translations of passages from Pushkin’s verse novel Eugene Onegin. Students will also examine Tchaikovsky’s expansion and adaptation of the same passages in his opera. Through class performance, group work, listening, and creative response, students will gain an understanding of the nuances of poetic translation and the myriad creative choices available to poet, librettist, and composer.

STEP 1: Students will likely be unfamiliar with Alexander Pushkin and his contributions to literary history. You may like to summarize the information found in the biographical sidebar Alexander Pushkin on his life, some of the fun facts, and/or selections from the timeline in this guide to give students a brief overview of his work and his stature in Russian literature.

Explain to students that Tchaikovsky’s opera Eugene Onegin is a setting of one of Pushkin’s works—a novel in verse (i.e. rhymed, metrical poetry), and it thus unites two of Russia’s great creative minds. By the time Tchaikovsky was working on his composition, Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin was a pillar of the Russian literary canon, and the novel’s leading female character, Tatiana, was universally beloved. But despite this status, the work also presented unique challenges to adaptation into other artistic genres, given Pushkin’s highly individual style and strict poetic structure.
STEP 2: To demonstrate this last point, distribute the first page of the reproducible handouts entitled Poetic License found at the back of this guide. Turn students’ attention to the text, a poem by Vladimir Nabokov entitled “On Translating Eugene Onegin,” also reprinted below. Invite a student or two to read the poem aloud.

What is translation? On a platter
A poet’s pale and glaring head,
A parrot’s screech, a monkey’s chatter,
And profanation of the dead.
The parasites you were so hard on
Are pardoned if I have your pardon,
O, Pushkin, for my stratagem:
I traveled down your secret stem,
And reached the root, and fed upon it;
Then, in a language newly learned,
I grew another stalk and turned
Your stanza patterned on a sonnet,
Into my honest roadside prose—
All thorn, but cousin to your rose.

Reflected words can only shiver
Like elongated lights that twist
In the black mirror of a river
Between the city and the mist.
Elusive Pushkin! Persevering,
I still pick up Tatiana’s earring,
Still travel with your sullen rake.
I find another man’s mistake,
I analyze alliterations
That grace your feasts and haunt the great
Fourth stanza of your Canto Eight.
This is my task—a poet’s patience
And scholiastic passion blent:
Dove-droppings on your monument.

First, allow students some time to reflect on the poem and discern its meaning. They may record their thoughts on the space provided on the handout. Next, initiate a discussion on the meaning of this dense text. What is Nabokov talking about? (As indicated by the poem’s title, he is reflecting on the difficulties of translating Eugene Onegin from Russian into English.) What does the narrator claim about the merits of translation versus the original poetry? (Translations are a “monkey’s screech” and a “profanation,” etc.) What is the style of the narrator’s translation? (It is “honest, roadside prose”—i.e. it is not a poetic translation.) What is the effect of Nabokov’s neologisms in the penultimate line? What are the poetic rules he is upholding? (rhyme and meter).

Next, delve into the precise poetic structure of the two 14-line stanzas. On a smart board, on the handout, or on the blackboard, map out the rhyme structure, line by line, together as a class. The result should be:

ABAB CCDD EFFE GG

If students have studied Shakespeare’s sonnets, they may be aware that Shakespeare used the similar rhyme structure of ABAB CDCD EFEF GG for his sonnets; and they may be interested to know that Petrarch used another structure—ABBA ABBA CDECDE—for his own. The precise scheme that Nabokov employs in the poem above is identical to the one Pushkin used in Eugene Onegin. It is so distinctive that it has been termed the “Onegin stanza” or the “Pushkin sonnet.”

Taking the literary analysis to another level, you may have students analyze which rhymes are masculine (i.e. only a single syllable is rhymed, as in “learned” and “turned”) and feminine (i.e. two or more syllables are rhymed, as in “upon it” and “sonnet”). Students will find that the alternation of masculine and feminine rhymes precisely matches the overall rhyme scheme. You may also have students analyze the poetic meter; here, the structure is equally rigid. The Onegin stanza is composed in strict tetrameter (four stressed syllables per line). In sum, Pushkin’s verse structure is highly controlled, a virtuosic display of poetic invention.

At the close of your brief examination of the structure of Nabokov’s poem, point out to the class that Nabokov’s eventual translation of Eugene Onegin was neither rhymed nor in verse; he considered it impossible to do justice to Pushkin’s poetry in this way, and instead aimed to capture as much of his meaning and contextual nuance as he could in a prose translation.

STEP 3: Now it is time to turn Pushkin’s text. Distribute the next portion of the reproducible handouts and divide students into groups of 5 to 6 students each. In their groups, students should read each of the translated versions of “Onegin’s Sermon,” reproduced as Excerpt #1 in the handouts, making notes on the differences between them. How does the imagery vary? Is the tone consistent between translations? Does one version seem more earnest than another? More ironic? Students can make notes on the handouts.

After allowing sufficient time for groups to complete their reading and group review, open a discussion with the entire class on their discoveries. What are their impressions of each translation? Do they find one translation to be more compelling than the others? What makes it so? What do the translator’s choices in imagery and style say about his interpretation of the scene in question?

STEP 4: Now have students turn to the next page of the reproducible handout, which gives Tchaikovsky and his librettist’s version of the same scene. Have students read it to themselves or have a volunteer read it aloud. Then, with students following along to the text, play Tchaikovsky’s musical setting of Onegin’s Sermon, found on Track 1. Lead students in a discussion about the passage. Guiding questions may include:

- How does the length of Tchaikovsky’s passage compare to Pushkin’s?
- What is new in Tchaikovsky’s version? Are there differences in style? Students may think back to the shifts between the versions of the different translators.

DUELS

A practice dating back to at least the early Middle Ages and the stylized code of chivalry, dueling was long the preferred method, and considered the honorable way by some, to settle disagreements and satisfy affronts between two men, who were both typically members of the aristocracy. Duels might be fought for a range of reasons, from a perceived verbal insult to competition over a woman. Highly formalized and requiring a series of actions in preparation and execution, the duel would begin with the men meeting at a prearranged location. If they were unable to resolve their differences, they would count off a set number of paces, aim their pistols, and fire at each other.

Given Pushkin’s sensitive treatment of the duel in Eugene Onegin—its avoidability, meaninglessness, and the personal disaster it brings about for the title character, it is tragically ironic that the author himself would eventually die in the same way. Only a few years after completing the novel, Pushkin fought a duel in defense of his wife’s honor. He was mortally wounded and died two days later.
How does Tchaikovsky’s musical setting give us more information than the text alone?

You may like to bring up the notion of “tone,” or the overall character, atmosphere, or attitude of an artistic work. The tone of the two versions is very different. The style of Pushkin’s novel is witty and humorous, while Tchaikovsky’s opera is more earnest. What do the differing tones say about each creator’s attitude towards the characters? Do your students prefer one version to the other? Why or why not?

How does the music make you feel? What does it do to our understanding of the characters?

How would you describe the singers’ voices? High? Low? Tender? Melancholy? Pompous?

What does this convey about the characters and their personalities?

Is there anything that you think the poetry captured that is missing from the music?

Introduce the idea of an unreliable narrator. In Pushkin’s text, there is a narrator who has thoughts and opinions, and who often speaks directly to the reader. Tchaikovsky’s opera has no narrator. How does this affect the way the audience or reader perceives the story? How might the music itself fulfill the role of a narrator or commentator?

STEP 5: If time permits, repeat this process with the second set of translations and the corresponding scene from the opera. The musical excerpt can be found on Track 2.

FOLLOW-UP: As a take-home activity, students can choose one of the three supplemental stanzas of Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin and “translate” it line by line into their own style of poetry or prose. Students may find it helpful to review the synopsis of the opera as a whole for further details on the characters and situations of the story; feel free to distribute the synopsis or summary found in this guide for them to take home. After completing their translations, students should jot down some thoughts on how they think their passages might be augmented by music. What will the music tell the listener that the words do not? What instruments or voice types should the composer use to set their passages? Will their translation be set as an aria, a duet, or an ensemble? What should the tone of their passage be? Encourage students to be creative as they develop a plan for their musical settings.
Tatiana’s Musical Confession

By far the best known and most widely quoted portion of Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin is Tatiana’s letter to Onegin. In it, she lays her emotions bare to the reader as she works through the turbulence of her feelings for Onegin, her hesitation in how to respond, and her attempts to confess her love in a letter for him. Tchaikovsky’s musical setting takes Pushkin’s remarkably brief text and expands it not only with added lines, but with lush, sweeping melodies that transport the listener along with Tatiana’s roiling emotions.

This activity is designed to help students explore the musical, emotional, and theatrical elements of the Letter Scene. They will:

- study some of the musical motifs from Eugene Onegin
- listen to and analyze a selection of musical excerpts
- imagine how the scene might be staged, based on Tchaikovsky’s musical choices

STEPS

Students will first review musical vocabulary and concepts before studying a number of important musical motifs from Eugene Onegin. After this preparatory work, they will engage in a close study of Tatiana’s Letter Scene from the opera, remarking on the musical attributes of each section—including not only their basic musical characteristics, but also identifying motifs that are present in each section and drawing conclusions on the overall emotional meaning of the music. The lesson concludes with students formulating plans on how each section might be staged, based on their understanding of the text and music.

STEP 1: As preliminary work at the start of class, make sure that students are comfortable with the Ten Essential Musical Terms. You may want to photocopy the page and

Music

IN PREPARATION

For this activity, students will need the reproducible resources available at the back of this guide entitled Tatiana’s Musical Confession as well as the audio selections from Eugene Onegin available online or on the accompanying CD. You may also want to share the plot summary and Ten Essential Musical Terms found in this guide.

CURRICULAR CONNECTIONS

General Music, Band, Orchestra, Chorus, Humanities, Arts

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- To introduce and/or reinforce knowledge of musical terminology
- To hone aural skills by listening to and analyzing musical excerpts
- To draw conclusions about the meaning of a scene based on its musical characteristics

---

Anna Netrebko, front, as Tatiana. Ken Howard/Metropolitan Opera distribute it as a handout, or alternatively write the terms on your blackboard so that students can easily call them to mind later in the lesson. As applicable, you may want to demonstrate the terms on the piano or with your instrument, and play the musical examples found in the audio tracks to aid students in their understanding. A guide to these tracks is below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>MUSICAL TERM</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Accelerando</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Rallentando</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Crescendo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Diminuendo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Lyricism</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Modulation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Rubato</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>Syncopation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>Tremolo</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

STEP 2: Students will also need to have a basic understanding of the plot of Eugene Onegin. You may like to use the summary included in this guide (rather than the full synopsis, which includes more detail than students will need for the purposes of this lesson), or instead briefly talk over the story of Eugene Onegin. Namely, it follows Tatiana, a shy but romantic girl from a country estate, who falls in love with a worldly and bored gentleman, Eugene Onegin. She pours her heart out to him in a letter, but he rejects and humiliates her for her youthful idealism. He then flirts idly with her sister Olga, and when his friend Lenski (who loves Olga) takes offence, matters between them deteriorate until Lenski challenges Onegin to a duel. The two friends meet at the appointed time, and to his horror, Onegin kills Lenski with his first shot. Some time goes by, and Onegin returns to St. Petersburg, attending a ball at the noble Princess Gremina’s house. Onegin is shocked to recognize Tatiana, who is now married and widely admired for her elegant, composed grace. He realizes that he is in love with Tatiana, but when he confesses all to her, she is unwilling to leave her husband, and Onegin is left alone.

STEP 3: Now distribute the Tatiana’s Musical Confession reproducible handout found at the back of this guide, which presents the four major musical motifs of the opera. These motifs help create musical meaning, providing the audience with clues as to what the characters are thinking and feeling. They also help provide musical coherence, acting as recurring musical material that is easily recognizable.
Work through the motifs with your students, having them follow along to the printed music on the handout as you play Tracks 12 through 15. Encourage students to describe each motif, commenting on their melodic shape, harmony, and overall dramatic effect. Space is provided on the handout for students to make notes. You will likely need to play each example several times. Each of the motifs is summarized below for your convenience.

Track 12: Tatiana’s Motif

[Musical notation]

A minor-mode, evocatively chromatic falling line against a legato chordal accompaniment. The feeling is yearning and rather melancholy.

Track 13: Solitude Motif

[Musical notation]

Begins with an expressive appoggiatura; after a brief rest, a rising chromatic line introduces another expressive appoggiatura.

Track 14: Confession of Love Motif

[Musical notation]

A major-mode descending scale with chromatic alterations merges into a cantabile gesture in the French horns. The effect is one of innocence and earnestness.

Track 15: Onegin’s Motif

[Musical notation]

A minor-mode scale rises against a syncopated accompaniment, creating an effect of restlessness and tension.

FUN FACT: Shortly before Tchaikovsky embarked on Eugene Onegin, his work was introduced to Nadezhda von Meck, a wealthy widow, avid supporter of Russian music, and patron of the Moscow Conservatory. Wishing to support his talent, she established a stipend for Tchaikovsky that allowed him to depart his post at the Conservatory and focus solely on his composition. Their ensuing correspondence demonstrates their high mutual regard; Tchaikovsky dedicated a number of his compositions to von Meck and frequently called her his “best friend.”
STEP 4: It is now time to turn to Tatiana’s Letter Scene. Explain to students that this is an extended section in which Tatiana is alone on stage, struggling with her feelings for Onegin and her resolve to confess her love in a letter to him. First, play the entire scene on Track 16 while students follow along to the text and translation provided in the reproducible handouts.

Next, have students turn to the chart in the handouts and begin working through the scene one section at a time, as it is broken down in the audio examples in Tracks 17 through 29. A translation of the text is provided in the first column. In the section on the right, students should list the musical elements they hear, drawing on their knowledge of the Ten Essential Musical Terms and their musical backgrounds. There students should indicate which (if any) musical motifs they hear. (There may be more than one motif per example.) Students should feel free to refer back to the list of the Ten Essential Musical Terms as well as their handouts on the musical motifs as necessary. Finally, students should fill in the next section of the chart with their conclusions on the emotional or dramatic meaning of the passage, based on their understanding of both the text and the music. They may find it helpful to imagine what Tatiana is feeling at that particular moment. It will be necessary to play each excerpt several times.

A completed chart is provided on the following pages for your reference.

STEP 5: As a final activity or as a homework assignment, you may encourage students to extend their opinions of each section’s emotional and dramatic meaning by imagining how each excerpt should be staged. Opera directors and singers work together in rehearsal to map out where a character moves on stage and how a text should be brought to life through body language. This process is called “blocking.”

This portion of the activity is designed to encourage students to think from the point of view of a director. How would they describe or plan out Tatiana’s physical movement and blocking in each section? When does she sit at the table to write? When she does stand up? Does she pace back and forth? Does she fall to her knees? Using evidence from the text and musical shape of each portion of the scene, students can record their plans on their charts in the provided spaces.

FOLLOW UP: As a follow-up activity, you might have groups of students mime their blocking for portions of the excerpt while playing the corresponding music as found on the tracks above. After several groups perform their scenes, conclude the lesson with a group discussion of which stagings made for the most effective and dramatically convincing scenes.
Ten Essential Musical Terms

Accelerando/Rallentando Two terms that depict changes in tempo. An accelerando (Italian for “quickening”) marking indicates that the performer should gradually increase the speed of the music. Rallentando (“slowing down”) indicates the opposite.

Dynamics The relative intensity in the volume of musical sound. When indicated in a score, dynamics are communicated by a set of standard Italian terms and symbols (such as \( f \) for forte, \( p \) for piano, \( mf \) for mezzo-forte, and so on). The concept of dynamics comprises not only the degree of loudness, but also the movement between different volume levels (as in crescendo, “growing louder,” and diminuendo, “growing softer”).

Lyricism A term borrowed from poetry meaning “songfulness.” In music, it is used to refer to a style that depicts an outpouring of emotion and expression in melody and long, legato phrases. Lyrical musical settings often emphasize a character’s feelings of love, longing, romance, heartbreak, sorrow, or desire.

Modulation A shift to a new key within a musical composition. Tonal music—most music written between the early 17th and early 20th centuries—usually begins and ends in the same key, with modulating material in the middle. Modulations can be close or distant, depending on how drastically the key signature must change. Distant modulations can sound surprising or jarring to the listener.

Motif A musical motif (or motive) is a brief musical idea that recurs throughout a musical work. Motives can be based on a melodic, rhythmic, or harmonic component, and their repetition makes them recognizable to the listener. In opera, musical motives are often symbolically associated with specific characters or dramatic ideas.

Recitative A term with far-reaching significance across the history of opera, recitative refers to a type of vocal utterance that can be characterized as song-speech. It is derived from the Italian verb that translates as “to recite” and is meant to capture the gestures of the spoken word. Recitative is understood in contrast to the more tuneful and reflective mode of arias and ensemble pieces, in which texts are often repeated.

Rubato Described as the “push and pull” in musical tempo, the term rubato refers to a type of rhythmic freedom taken by a performer. Rubato is created by speeding up and slowing down the tempo of a musical moment for expressive effect. The use of rubato may create the feeling of a singer indulging in a note for a moment or suspending time briefly before moving on. While it can be expressively beautiful, it can make it difficult to keep a steady conducting pattern, as the general flow of the beat is temporarily suspended.

Scale A sequence of notes proceeding up or down, spanning an entire octave or a portion of an octave. The pitches of any composition can be distilled into a scale, and there are many different types of scales. Western tonal music employs both the major scale and the minor scale; the minor scale possesses variations in how the 6th and 7th scale degrees are treated, resulting in the natural minor, melodic, and harmonic minor scales.

Syncopation Syncopation describes the technique and effect of connecting an unstressed note or beat to a following, stressed one, resulting in an unexpected shift in the pulse of a composition, while the overall meter remains regular and discernible in other parts of the musical texture.

Tremolo A musical term indicating the rapid repetition of a single note, from the Italian for “trembling” or “quivering.” In string instruments, it requires that players move their bows back and forth across the string as fast as possible. A solo string player playing a tremolo may not sound very powerful, but when all the string instruments in the orchestra play a tremolo together, it creates an impressive effect.
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession

ANSWER KEY

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>17</td>
<td>Let me perish, but first let me, with dazzling hope, summon bliss as yet unknown. I'm getting to understand life's sweetness! I drink the magic potion of desire! I am beset by visions! Everywhere, everywhere I look, I see my fatal tempter! Wherever I look, I see him!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>No, that's all wrong! I'll try again! Ah, what's wrong with me! I'm burning up! I don't know how to begin!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>“I'm writing to you, ...and then what? What else can I say? I know that it's in your power to punish me with your contempt! But if you have at least one grain of pity for my unhappy lot, you will not abandon me. At first I wished to remain silent; then, believe me, you would never have known my shame, never!”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS:
- String tremolos
- Major mode
- Accelerando
- Crescendo
- Lyrical melody in strings
- Ascending musical gestures

MOTIF: none

EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING:
- Excitement
- Overcome by the intensity of her emotions

MUSICAL ELEMENTS:
- Fluttering musical gestures
- Rallentando
- Recitative-like declamation

MOTIF: Tatiana

EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING:
- Unsure, she starts to doubt herself
- Frustration

MUSICAL ELEMENTS:
- Minor mode rising scales
- Modulation
- Pulsing syncopation
- Piano dynamics
- Rallentando at the end

MOTIF: Onegin

EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING:
- Earnest, as her mind is swirling and she is intently trying to communicate how she feels
- Vulnerable
- Shame, uncertainty
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession ANSWER KEY (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>20</td>
<td>O yes, I swore to lock within my breast this declaration of a crazed and ardent passion! Alas, I don’t have the strength to control my heart! Come what may, whatever happens, I will confess to him! Courage! He will know all!</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Lyrical melodies Yearning musical gestures Rubato Recitative-like style
MOTIF: Tatiana, Solitude
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: Overwhelmed by the intensity of her emotions Reflection Determination

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>21</td>
<td>“Why, oh why did you come to us? I would never have met you in this remote countryside, nor known this bitter torment. The excitement of a youthful heart would have calmed with time, who knows? Most likely I would have found another, and been a faithful wife and virtuous mother…”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Minor mode Rising and falling/swirling musical gestures Modulation Rubato Syncopation Piano dynamics Rallentando at the end
MOTIF: Onegin
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: Confusion Doubt and distress Struggling to express herself

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>Another! No, not to any other in the world would I have given my heart! It is decreed on high, it is the will of heaven: I am yours! My whole life has been a pledge of this inevitable encounter; I know this: God sent you to me, you are my keeper till the grave!</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Major mode, Più mosso (i.e. with faster motion) Crescendo Pulsing musical gestures, rallentando at the end
MOTIF: none
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: Regaining confidence Hopeful, optimistic
You appeared before me in my dreams; as yet unseen, you were already dear, your wondrous gaze filled me with longing, your voice resounded in my heart.

Long ago... no, it was no dream! As soon as you arrived, I recognized you, I almost swooned, began to burn up, and said to myself: It’s him!

I know it! I have heard you ... Did you not speak to me in the silence, when I visited the poor, or sought to calm my anguished soul in prayer? And just this very moment, was it not you, dear vision, that flashed in the transparent darkness quietly standing at my bedside? Wasn’t it you, who joyfully and lovingly whispered words of hope to me?
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession  ANSWER KEY (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>“Who are you? My guardian angel or a cruel tempter? Put my doubts at rest. Maybe this is all an empty dream, the delusion of an innocent soul, and something else is meant for me?…”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Modulation to new key
Major mode
Lyrical melodies
Rubato
Rallentando
Descending/falling musical gestures in the vocal line
Piano dynamics
MOTIF: Confession of Love
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: Reflective Vulnerable, exposed
Unsure of herself, with a desire for answers
Afraid of being hurt

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>But so be it! From here on I entrust my fate to you; in tears before you, I beg for your protection, I beg you!</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Minor mode
Pulsing/driving musical gestures
Syncopation
Più mosso
Rubato
MOTIF: none
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: Deciding to let go of her inhibitions

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>Imagine: I am all alone here! No one understands me! My mind is restless, and I must suffer in silence! I wait for you, I wait for you! Say the word to revive my heart’s fondest hopes or wake me from this oppressive dream with, alas, the scorn I have deserved!</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Grand, lyrical melody
Accelerando/più mosso in the middle, then rallentando at the end
Crescendo
Forte dynamics
MOTIF: Confession of Love
EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING: overwhelmed by the intensity of her feelings Alone, as if no one understands her Hopeful
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Tatiana’s Musical Confession ANSWER KEY (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 29    | It’s done! I can’t read it over,
       | I’m overcome by shame and fright,
       | but I trust your honor and put
       | my fate in your hands! |

MUSICAL ELEMENTS: Fast, ascending scales at the beginning Fortissimo dynamics
Accelerando
Modulation
Accents
Tremolos in the high strings, ending with a dramatic musical flourish

MOTIF: Confession of Love

EMOTIONAL OR DRAMATIC MEANING:
Excited and terrified all at the same time
Supporting the Student Experience during The Met: Live in HD Transmission

Watching and listening to a performance is a unique experience that takes students beyond the printed page to an immersion in images, sound, interpretation, technology, drama, skill, and craft. Performance activities help students analyze different aspects of the experience and engage critically with the performance. They will consider the creative choices that have been made for the particular production they are watching and examine different aspects of the performance.

Each Performance Activity incorporates a reproducible sheet. Students should bring this activity sheet to the Live in HD transmission and fill it out during intermission and/or after the final curtain. The activities direct attention to details of the production that might otherwise go unnoticed.

For Eugene Onegin, the first activity sheet, Decisions, Decisions, asks students to consider the consequences of the various choices made by the characters throughout the opera. Students will construct a decision tree based on characters’ actions and think about whether the opera’s tragic conclusion was inevitable or avoidable.

The second, basic activity sheet is called My Highs & Lows. It is meant to be collected, opera by opera, over the course of the season. This sheet serves to guide students toward a consistent set of objective observations, as well as to help them articulate their own opinions. It is designed to enrich the students’ understanding of the art form as a whole. The ratings system encourages students to express their critique: use these ratings to spark discussions that require careful, critical thinking.

The Performance Activity reproducible handouts can be found in the back of this guide. On the next page, you’ll find an activity created specifically for follow-up after the Live in HD transmission.

IN PREPARATION
For this activity, students will need the Performance Activity reproducible handouts found in the back of this guide.

COMMON CORE STANDARDS AND EUGENE ONEGIN
CCSS.ELA-LITERACY.RI.9-10.1
Cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text.

CSS.ELA-LITERACY.RL.9-10.3
Analyze how complex characters (e.g., those with multiple or conflicting motivations) develop over the course of a text, interact with other characters, and advance the plot or develop the theme.

CCSS.ELA-LITERACY.RI.9-10.3
Analyze how the author unfolds an analysis or series of ideas or events, including the order in which the points are made, how they are introduced and developed, and the connections that are drawn between them.
Growing Pains

Students will enjoy starting the class with an open discussion of the Met performance. What did they like? What didn’t they? Did anything surprise them? What would they like to see or hear again? What would they have done differently? The discussion offers an opportunity to apply the notes on students’ My Highs & Lows sheet, as well as their thoughts about the visual design of the Met production—in short, to see themselves as Eugene Onegin experts.

Apart from its many insightful observations on human nature, Tchaikovsky’s Eugene Onegin is also a story about evolution and transformation. A shy, naïve girl from the country grows into a beautiful woman of great poise and self-control. A man bored by everything he encounters is consumed by passion and changed into an individual capable of breaking all social mores. Tatiana’s transition occurs in between the episodes portrayed in the opera. Onegin’s transformation from aloof aristocrat to ardent lover, on the other hand, happens in an instant, entirely within view of the audience.

Ask your students to consider the nature of these changes in Tatiana’s and Onegin’s characters. Specifically:

- Are they believable? Did you “buy” Tatiana’s transformation? What about Onegin’s?
- Do you think Onegin loved Tatiana all along? Why or why not? If not, what might have inspired his sudden feelings?
Do you think Onegin’s rejection of Tatiana played a role in her evolution? Would Tatiana have become the graceful and elegant aristocrat of the last act without Onegin’s earlier refusal?

Do you think Tatiana made the right choice? Do you think she and Onegin might have been happy together? Why or why not?

What do you imagine for the two characters after the final scene of the opera? What will become of Onegin and Tatiana? How will they change or evolve from this point on?

What makes a person change? Does someone’s character really ever change, or is the seed of that change contained inside a person all along?

Can students discern how Tchaikovsky’s music expresses and matches the changes within Onegin and Tatiana?

Ask students to consider an evolution they recognize within themselves. Prompt them to think about the timeline of that change. Did it occur suddenly or over the course of months, maybe even years? Did something in their past slowly build and develop within them, or was their evolution triggered suddenly by a specific situation?

If students are comfortable sharing their personal histories, invite them to participate in a conversation about how their stories demonstrate the many different ways a person, or character, can change. For homework, ask them to write about a personal anecdote in the third person, as if described by someone else. As them to consider how they might show, rather than tell, their reader about the evolution or change they are describing. Students may compose their anecdote in any format they wish: as a short essay or reflection, dramatic scene, work of poetry, or in any other artistic format.
GUIDE TO AUDIO TRACKS

Excerpts taken from the Metropolitan Opera broadcast of February 14, 2009

EUGENE ONEGIN
Thomas Hampson

TATIANA
Karita Mattila

LENSKI
Piotr Beczala

OLGA
Ekaterina Semenchuk

PRINCE GREMIN
James Morris

Conducted by Jiří Belohlávek

Metropolitan Opera Orchestra and Chorus

1 Onegin’s Sermon
2 Lenski’s Aria
3 Accelerando
4 Rallentando
5 Crescendo
6 Diminuendo
7 Lyricism
8 Modulation
9 Rubato
10 Syncopation
11 Tremolo
12 Tatiana’s Motif
13 Solitude Motif
14 Confession of Love Motif
15 Onegin’s Motif
16 Tatiana’s Letter Scene in full
17 “Let me perish”
18 “No, that’s all wrong!”
19 “I’m writing to you”
20 “Oh yes, I swore”
21 “Why, oh why did you come to us?”
22 “Another!”
23 “You came to me in my dreams”
24 “As soon as you arrived”
25 “I know it!”
26 “Who are you?”
27 “But so be it!”
28 “Imagine: I am all alone here!”
29 “It’s done!”
Classroom Activity

Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music

“On Translating Eugene Onegin” by Vladimir Nabokov

What is translation? On a platter
A poet’s pale and glaring head,
A parrot’s screech, a monkey’s chatter,
And profanation of the dead.
The parasites you were so hard on
Are pardoned if I have your pardon,
O, Pushkin, for my stratagem:
I traveled down your secret stem,
And reached the root, and fed upon it;
Then, in a language newly learned,
I grew another stalk and turned
Your stanza patterned on a sonnet,
Into my honest roadside prose–
All thorn, but cousin to your rose.

Reflected words can only shiver
Like elongated lights that twist
In the black mirror of a river
Between the city and the mist.
Elusive Pushkin! Persevering,
I still pick up Tatiana’s earring,
Still travel with your sullen rake.
I find another man’s mistake,
I analyze alliterations
That grace your feasts and haunt the great
Fourth stanza of your Canto Eight.
This is my task—a poet’s patience
And scholiastic passion blent:
Dove-droppings on your monument.

Notes on the poem’s meaning:

Rhyme scheme:

Meter:
“His days and dreams, what man recovers?
My soul, nothing can renew....
My love for you is as a brother’s,
More tender even, but as true:
So hear me without tears or anger,
A girl will often change her lover,
Fresh dreams will replace the last,
As, after winter’s icy blast,
Spring clothes the branches with new leaves,
As heaven dictates. You’ll love again.
And then...our hearts we must restrain,
Not all will see what your soul weaves,
Know you as I, share your belief:
The inexperienced come to grief.”

“For two long minutes neither spoke,
And then Onegin approached her,
Saying: "You wrote to me, I broke
The seal, I have read your letter.
Don't disavow it, I find here,
A love that's innocent, sincere.
Your candour: that is dear to me,
It brought to life, instantly,
Those feelings, so long quiescent;
That’s no ready compliment,
All that you sincerely meant
I'll requite, with your assent:
But hear my confession through,
I'll leave the verdict up to you."

“I was not born for happiness,
All such is alien to my mind;
Of your perfection too, no less
Am I unworthy, you would find.
Believe me (conscience is my guide)
Wed, the fire would soon have died;
However I wished to prove true,
Habit would cool my love for you.
Then you would weep, yet your tears,
Your grief, would never move my heart,
But madden me, spur me to depart.
What thorns, not roses, through the years
Would Hymen strew along our way,
Many a night, and many a day?”

“What in the world is worse than this,
A household, a neglected wife,
Mourning her husband’s absent kiss,
Her days and nights alone, through life,
While the spouse, knowing her worth,
(Cursing the hour of his birth),
Is ever-jealous, sullen, sour,
Cold, darkly threatening, and dour!
Such am I. Was it this you sought,
With your pure and ardent mind;
Was this what you hoped to find;
This the message your note brought?
Is this the destiny that waits,
Dealt you by the cruel Fates?

“Could I happily circumscribe
My life with the domestic round;
Could kindly fate for me prescribe
A role as husband, father; found
My being in family existence
For but a moment, mind and sense—
Then truly, in this life,
You alone would be my wife.
No rhetoric, no flattery,
I'd find in you my heart’s ideal,
Find that youthful folly real,
A cure for my sad history,
Token of every beauty, good,
And be as happy...as I could!”

A.S. Kline © 2009
Moments of silence, quite unbroken; then, stepping nearer, Eugene said: “You wrote to me, and nothing spoken can disavow that. I have read those words where love, without condition, pours out its guiltless frank admission, and your sincerity of thought is dear to me, for it has brought feeling to what had long been heartless: but I won’t praise you—let me join and pay my debt in the same coin with an avowal just as artless; hear my confession as I stand I leave the verdict in your hand. “Could I be happy circumscribing my life in a domestic plot; had fortune blest me by prescribing husband and father as my lot; could I accept for just a minute the homely scene, take pleasure in it, then I’d have looked for you alone to be the bride I’d call my own. Without romance, or false insistence, I’ll say: with past ideals in view I would have chosen none but you as helpmeet in my sad existence, as gauge of all things that were good, and been as happy...as I could! “But I was simply not intended for happiness—that alien role. Should your perfections be expended in vain on my unworthy soul? Believe (as conscience is my warrant), wedlock for us would be abhorrent. I’d love you, but inside a day, with custom, love would fade away; your tears would flow—but your emotion, your grief would fail to touch my heart, they’d just enrage it with their dart. What sort of roses, in your notion, would Hymen bring us—blooms that might last many a day, and many a night! “I’ve dreams and years past resurrection; a soul that nothing can renew... I feel a brotherly affection, or something tenderer still, for you. Listen to me without resentment: girls often change to their contentment light dreams for new ones...so we see each springtime, on the growing tree, fresh leaves...for such is heaven’s mandate. You’ll love again, but you must teach your heart some self-restraint; for each and every man won’t understand it as I have...learn from my belief that inexperience leads to grief.”
Two minutes they in silence spent,
Onegin then approached and said:
“You have a letter to me sent.
Do not excuse yourself. I read
Confessions which a trusting heart
May well in innocence impart.
Charming is your sincerity,
Feelings which long had ceased to be
It wakens in my breast again.
But I came not to adulate:
Your frankness I shall compensate
By an avowal just as plain.
An ear to my confession lend;
To thy decree my will I bend.

“But strange am I to happiness;
‘Tis foreign to my cast of thought;
Me your perfections would not bless;
I am not worthy them in aught;
And honestly ‘tis my belief
Our union would produce but grief.
Though now my love might be intense,
Habit would bring indifference.
I see you weep. Those tears of yours
Tend not my heart to mitigate,
But merely to exasperate;
Judge then what roses would be ours,
What pleasures Hymen would prepare
For us, may be for many a year.

“What can be drearier than the house,
Wherein the miserable wife
Deplores a most unworthy spouse
And leads a solitary life?
The tiresome man, her value knowing,
Yet curses on his fate bestowing,
Is full of frigid jealousy,
Mute, solemn, frowning gloomily.
Such am I. This did ye expect,
When in simplicity ye wrote
Your innocent and charming note
With so much warmth and intellect?
Hath fate apportioned unto thee
This lot in life with stern decree?

“Ideas and time ne’er backward move;
My soul I cannot renovate —
I love you with a brother’s love,
Perchance one more affectionate.
Listen to me without disdain.
A maid hath oft, may yet again
Replace the visions fancy drew;
Thus trees in spring their leaves renew
As in their turn the seasons roll.

‘Tis evidently Heaven’s will You fall in love again. But still—
Learn to possess more self-control.
Not all will like myself proceed—
And thoughtlessness to woe might lead.”

Macmillan, 1881.
For a few seconds they were silent; Onegin then went up to her and quoth: “You wrote to me. Do not deny it. I have read a trustful soul’s avowals, an innocent love’s outpourings; your candidness appeals to me, in me it has excited emotions long grown silent. But I don’t want to praise you—I will repay you for it with an avowal likewise void of art; hear my confession; unto your judgment I submit.

“If I by the domestic circle had wanted to bound life; if to be father, husband, a pleasant lot had ordered me; if with the familistic picture I were but for one moment captivated; then, doubtlessly, save you alone no other bride I’d seek. I’ll say without madrigal spangles: my past ideal having found, I’d doubtlessly have chosen you alone for mate of my sad days, in gage of all that’s beautiful, and would have been happy—insofar as I could!

“But I’m not made for bliss; my soul is strange to it; in vain are your perfections: I’m not at all worthy of them. Believe me (conscience is thereof the pledge), wedlock to us would be a torment. However much I loved you, having grown used, I’d cease to love at once; you would begin to weep; your tears would fail to touch my heart—they merely would exasperate it. Judge, then, what roses Hymen would lay in store for us—and, possibly, for many days!

“For dreams and years there’s no return; I shall not renovate my soul. I love you with a brother’s love and maybe still more tenderly. So listen to me without wrath: a youthful maid will more than once for dreams exchange light dreams; a sapling thus its leaves changes with every spring. By heaven thus ’tis evidently destined. Again you will love; but… learn to control yourself; not everyone as I will understand you; to trouble inexperience leads.”
Now take a few minutes to answer the questions below.

What are your initial reactions to this excerpt?

What does it tell you about the character of Onegin? Do you feel like you have a good sense of who he is?

How do the rhyme schemes of the translations affect the tone of the scene? Do they make it funny? Serious? There are no wrong answers.

What do you think Onegin’s attitude is as he delivers this “sermon”?

How does the imagery differ between the various translations?

Other notes:
Onegin’s Sermon

TRACK 1

Kogda bi zhizn domashnim krugom ya ograničit zakhotyel, kogda b mnye bit otom, suprugom priyatni zhrebi povelyel, to, vyerno b, krome vas odnoi, nevysti ne iskal inoi.
No ya ne sozdan dla blazhenstva, yemu chuzhda dusha moya.
No rapsni vashi sovershenstva, ikh ne dostoin vovse ya.
Povyerte, sovest v tom porukoi, supruhstvo nam budet mukoi.
Ya skolko ni lyubil bi vas, priviknuv, razlyublyu totchas.
Sudite zh wy, kakiye roz Nam zagotovil Gimeneyi, i, možhet bit, na mnogo dnyei!
Mechtam i godam net vозврата!
Aх, net vозврата;
Ne obnovlyu dushi moyei!
Ya vas lyublyu любовью брата,
Любовью брата,
Иль, может быть, еще нежней!
Иль, может быть еще,
Еще нежней!
Послушайте ж меня без гнева,
Смените раз младая дева
Мечтами легкие мечты.
Учитесь властвовать собой;...
Не всякий вас, как я, поймет.
К беде неопытность ведет!

If I wished to spend my life in a close-knit family, and it were my fate
to be a husband and a father, then, probably, you would be the bride that I would choose.
But I wasn’t made for married bliss,
it is a foreign concept to my soul,
your perfections are not for me;
I am quite unworthy of them.
Believe me, I swear to you,
marrige would be torturous for us.
No matter how much I loved you, routine would kill that love.
Think, then, what a thorny bed of roses
Hymen would prepare for us, to, perhaps, be endured for a lifetime!
One cannot return to dreams and youth,
No, return is impossible:
I cannot change my soul!
I love you with a brother’s love,
a brother’s love
or, perhaps, more than that!
Perhaps, perhaps more than that!
Listen to me without getting upset,	often a young girl will exchange one dream for another.
Learn to control your feelings;
Not everyone will be as understanding as I am.
Inexperience leads to disaster!
At home, his pistols are inspected
Then replaced, their case shut tight;
He undresses; a book’s selected,
Schiller,* to scan by candlelight.
His sad heart prevents all rest,
By a single thought oppressed:
He seems to see his Olga, bright
In all her beauty, in the night.
Vladimir shuts the book once more,
Then poetry flows from his pen,
Full of love’s foolishness, again
Verse sounds, as he strides the floor,
Like that by Delvig’s muse created,
At dinner, when intoxicated.

By chance, I have the lines, unfinished,
They’re here before me, his in truth:
‘Where, oh where have you vanished,
Golden springtime of my youth?
This day to come, what will it bring?
My eyes in vain seek out the thing
That’s veiled in deepest mystery.
No matter: a just fate awaits me.
Whether I fall struck by the power
Of its arrow, or death wings by,
All is well: our moments fly,
Sleep and waking have their hour,
Blessed the day of toil and care,
Blessed the tomb’s darkness there.’

‘The morning star will tremble bright,
Then the shining day will dawn,
And I—perhaps, far from the light,
Will know the secrets of death’s bourn;
Lethe will drown all memory
Of the poet, this world forget me,
But you, the beautiful, and dear,
Will you not stop to shed a tear
Over my urn, and think: “He loved,
And in the fierce storm and strife,
All the sad morning of his life,
By me alone his soul was moved!…?
Friend of my heart, eternal friend,
Come to me, come: yours, to the end!’

---

* a German poet and philosopher
 Anton Delvig, a poet and close friend of Pushkin
 in Greek mythology, one of the rivers of the Underworld; drinking from its waters caused forgetfulness and the erasure of earthly memory
TRANSLATION BY CHARLES JOHNSTON (1977)

Once home, he brought out and inspected his pistols, laid them in their case, undressed, by candlelight selected and opened Schiller... but the embrace of one sole thought holds him in keeping and stops his doleful heart from sleeping: Olga is there, he sees her stand in untold beauty close at hand. Vladimir shuts the book, for writing prepares himself; and then his verse, compact of amorous trash, and worse, flows and reverberates. Reciting, he sounds, in lyric frenzy sunk, like Delvig when he’s dining drunk.

By chance those verses haven’t vanished; I keep them, and will quote them here: ‘Whither, oh whither are ye banished, my golden days when spring was dear? What fate is my tomorrow brewing? the answer’s past all human viewing, it’s hidden deep in gloom and dust. No matter; fate’s decree is just. Whether the arrow has my number, whether it goes careering past, all’s well; the destined hour at last comes for awakening, comes for slumber; blessed are daytime’s care and cark,* blest is the advent of the dark!

‘The morning star will soon be shining, and soon will day’s bright tune be played; but I perhaps will be declining into the tomb’s mysterious shade; the trail the youthful poet followed by sluggish Lethe may be swallowed, and I be by the world forgot; but, lovely maiden, wilt thou not on my untimely urn be weeping, thinking: he loved me, and in strife the sad beginnings of his life he consecrated to my keeping?... Friend of my heart, be at my side, beloved friend, thou art my bride!’

* an archaic noun meaning worry or trouble

CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music (CONTINUED)

TRANSLATION BY HENRY SPALDING (1881)

At home arriving he addressed
His care unto his pistols’ plight,
Replaced them in their box, undressed
And Schiller read by candlelight.
But one thought only filled his mind,
His mournful heart no peace could find,
Olga he sees before his eyes
Miraculously fair arise,
Vladimir closes up his book,
And grasps a pen: his verse, albeit
With lovers’ rubbish filled, was neat
And flowed harmoniously. He took
And spouted it with lyric fire—
Like Delvig when dinner doth inspire.

Destiny hath preserved his lay.
I have it. Lo! the very thing!
‘Oh! whither have ye winged your way,
Ye golden days of my young spring?
What will the coming dawn reveal?
In vain my anxious eyes appeal;
In mist profound all yet is hid.
So be it! Just the laws which bid
The fatal bullet penetrate,
Or innocently past me fly.
Good governs all! The hour draws nigh
Of life or death predestinate.
Blest be the labours of the light,
And blest the shadows of the night.

‘To-morrow’s dawn will glimmer gray,
Bright day will then begin to burn,
But the dark sepulchre I may
Have entered never to return.
The memory of the bard, a dream,
Will be absorbed by Lethe’s stream;
Men will forget me, but my urn
To visit, lovely maid, return,
O’er my remains to drop a tear,
And think: here lies who loved me well,
For consecrate to me he fell
In the dawn of existence drear.
Maid whom my heart desires alone,
Approach, approach; I am thine own.’

Macmillan, 1881.
TRANSLATION BY VLADIMIR NABOKOV (1964)

On coming home his pistols he inspected, then back into their case he put them, and, undressed, by candle opened Schiller; but there's one thought infolding him; the sad heart in him does not slumber: Olga, in beauty ineffable, he sees before him. Vladimir shuts the book, takes up his pen; his verses—full of love's nonsense—sound and flow. Aloud he reads them in a lyric fever, like drunken Delvig at a feast.

The verses chanced to be preserved; I have them; here they are:

‘Whither, ah! whither are ye fled, my springtime's golden days? What has the coming day in store for me? In vain my gaze attempts to grasp it; It matters not; fate's law is just.

Whether I fall, pierced by the dart, or whether it flies by—all is right: of waking and of sleep comes the determined hour; blest is the day of cares, blest, too, is the advent of darkness!

‘The ray of dawn will gleam tomorrow, and brilliant day will scintillate; whilst I, perhaps—I shall descend into the tomb's mysterious shelter, and the young poet's memory slow Lethe will engulf; the world will forget me; but thou, wilt thou come, maid of beauty, to shed a tear over the early urn and think: he loved me, to me alone he consecrated the doleful daybreak of a stormy life!...

Friend of my heart, desired friend, come, come: I'm thy spouse!’

CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music (CONTINUED)

Lensky’s Aria

TRACK 2

LENSKY: Kuda, kuda, kuda vy udalilis,
Vesny moye zlatye dni?
Chto den’, gryadushchi mne gotovit?
Ego moy vzor naprasno lovit:
V glubokoy mgle taitsa on!
Net nudy: prav sudby zakon!
Pady li ya, streloi pronyzenny,
Ily mimo proletit ona,
Blestet zaautra луч dennitsy
i zayigrayet yarki dyen,
a ya, bit mozhet, ya grobnitsi
soidu v tayinstvennu syen!
I pamyat yunovo poeta
poglotit myedlennaya Lyeta.
Zabudet mir menya; no ty, Ty, Olga...
Skazhi, priyedsh li, deva krasoty,
Slezu prolit nad rannei urnoi
i dumat: on menya lyubil!
On miy ejednoe posvayl
Rassvet pechalny zhizni buroiny!
Aly, Olga, ja tebya lyubil!
Tebey ejednoe posvayl
Rassvet pechalny zhizni buroiny!
Aly, Olga, ja tebya lyubil!
Serdechniy drug, zhelанныy drug.
Priydi, priydi!
Zhelannya drug, priydi, ja tvoy sypw!
Priydi, priydi!
Ja ju du tebya, zhelannya drug.
Priydi, priydi; ja tvoy sypw!
Kuda, kuda, kuda vy udalilis,
Zlatye dni, zlatye dni moye vesny?

Kuda, kuda, kuda vi udalilis,
vesny moye zlatye dni?
Shdo dyen gryadushchi mnye gotovit?
Yivo mny vzor naprasno lovit:
V gluboki mgl mnye tayitsa on!
Nyet nuzhdi; prav sudby zakon!
Pady li ya, streloy pronyzanny,
il mimo proletit ona,
Vsyo blago; bdvenia i sna prikhodit chas opredelyonn!
Blagoslovyen i dyen zabort, blagoslovyen i tmi prikhod!
Blesnyot zautra luch dennitsi
i zayigrayet yarki dyen,
a ya, bit mozhet, ya grobnitsi
soidu v tayinstvennu syen!
I pamyat yunovo poeta
poglotit myedlennaya Lyeta.
Zabudet mir menya; no ty, Ty, Olga...
Skazhi, priyedsh li, deva krasoty,
Slezu prolit nad rannei urnoi
i dumat: on menya lyubil!
On mnye yedinoi posvyatil rassvyet pechalny zhizni buroiny!
Aly, Olga, ya tebya lyubily!
Tebye yedinoi posvyatil
rassvyet pechalny zhizni buroiny!
Aly, Olga, ya tebya lyubily!
Serdechny drug, zhelannya drug.
Pridi, pridi!
Zhelannya drug, pridi, ya tвой sypw!
Pridi, pridi!
Ja ju du tebya, zhelannya drug.
Pridi, pridi; ya tвой sypw!
Kuda, kuda, kuda vi udalilis,
zlatye dni, zlatye dni moye vesny?

Where, oh where have you gone,
the golden days of my youth?
What lays in store for me today?
My gaze searches in vain;
all is dark!
It doesn’t matter: Fate is fair.
Should I fall, pierced by the arrow,
or should it fly past me,
’tis all the same; there is a time for dreaming and a time for waking.
Blessed is the day of care, blessed, too, the coming of darkness!
The early morning sunrise gleams,
and the day begins to brighten,
but I, perhaps, will enter the mysterious darkness of the grave!
And the memory of a young poet will be swallowed by Lethe’s sluggish stream.
The world will forget me; but you, Olga...
Say, beautiful girl, will you come to shed a tear at my untimely death and think: he loved me!
To me alone he devoted the sad dawn of his stormy life!
Oh, Olga, I loved you,
to you alone I devoted the sad dawn of my stormy life!
Oh, Olga, I loved you!
My heart’s beloved, my desired one,
come, oh come!
My desired one, come,
I am your betrothed, come, come!
I wait for you, my desired one,
come, come; I am your betrothed!
Where, oh where have you gone,
the golden days of my youth?
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music (CONTINUED)

How does the length of this libretto excerpt compare to Pushkin's poetry?

What does it do to our understanding of Lenski?

What can the music do that the original poetry cannot?

What did the poetry capture that the music misses?

Is there a version that you prefer? Why?

Is there a specific character or emotional element that the creator of your preferred version (Tchaikovsky or Pushkin) focuses on?

Does this allow you to engage with it more than the other version?

What about the artistic form (poetry or opera) allows this element to be in focus? Is it possible for that same element be as central in the other version?
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Poetic License: On Translating Pushkin in Words and Music (CONTINUED)

Take-Home Activity

OPTION #1

“Can it be she?” Eugene in wonder demanded. “Yes, she looks… And yet… from deepest backwood, furthest under…” And every minute his lorgnette stays fixed and focused on a vision which has recalled, without precision, forgotten features. “Can you say, prince, who in that dark-red bérêt, just there, is talking to the Spanish ambassador?” In some surprise the prince looks at him, and replies: “Wait, I’ll present you—but you banish yourself too long from social life.” “But tell me who she is.” “My wife.”

OPTION #2

From hour to hour a surer capture for Olga’s beauty, Lenski gives his soul to a delicious rapture that fills him and in which he lives. He’s always with her: either seated in darkness in her room, or treated to garden walks, as arm in arm they while away the morning’s calm. What else? Quite drunk with love’s illusion, he even dares, once in a while, emboldened by his Olga’s smile, and plunged in tender shame’s confusion, to play with a dishevelled tress, or kiss the border of her dress.

OPTION #3

We all meandered through our schooling haphazard; so, to God be thanks, it’s easy, without too much fooling, to pass for cultured in our ranks. Onegin was assessed by many (critical judges, strict as any) as well-read, though of pedant cast. Unforced, as conversation passed, he had the talent of saluting felicitously every theme, of listening like a judge-supreme while serious topics were disputing, or, with an epigram-surprise, of kindling smiles in ladies’ eyes.

Translation:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

Musical Settings:

What will the music tell the listener that the words do not?

________________________________________________________________________

What instruments or voice types should the composer use to set your passages?

________________________________________________________________________

Will your translation be set as an aria, a duet, or an ensemble?

________________________________________________________________________

What should the overall tone of your passage be?

________________________________________________________________________

Other notes on your musical setting:
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Tatiana’s Musical Confession

Track 12: Tatiana’s Motif

Track 13: Solitude Motif

Track 14: Confession of Love Motif

Track 15: Onegin’s Motif
THE MET: LIVE IN HD
EUGENE ONEGIN

CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

The Letter Scene

TRACK 16

TATIANA: Пускай погибнУ я, но прежде я в ослепительной надежде блаженство темное зову, я негу жизни узнаю!

Я пью волшебный яд желаний! меня преследуют мечты! Везде, везде передо мной Мой искуситель роковой! Везде, везде, он предо мною!

No, that's all wrong! I'll try again!

Ah, what’s wrong with me! I’m burning up!

I don’t know how to begin!

О да, клялась я сохранить в душе Признанье в страсти пылкой и безумной!
Увы! не в силах я владеть своей душой!
Пусть будет то, что быть должно со мной! Ему признаюсь! Смелей!
Он все узнает!

Let me perish, but first let me, with dazzling hope, summon bliss as yet unknown. I’m getting to understand life’s sweetness!

I drink the magic potion of desire!
I am beset by visions!
Everywhere, everywhere I look,
I see my fatal tempter!
Wherever I look, I see him!

The Letter Scene

TRACK 16

TATIANA: Пускай погибнУ я, но прежде я в ослепительной надежде блаженство темное зову, я негу жизни узнаю!

Я пью волшебный яд желаний! меня преследуют мечты! Везде, везде передо мной Мой искуситель роковой! Везде, везде, он предо мною!

Nyet, vsyo ne to! Nachnu snachala!
Akh, shto so mnoi? ya vsya goryu ...
Ne znayu, kak nachat...

She pauses, thinks, then begins to write again.

“Я вам пишу, ...чего же боле?
Что я могу еще сказать?
Теперь я знаю, в вашей воле
Меня презреньем наказать!
Но вы, к моей нечастной доле
Хоть каплю жалости храня,
Вы не оставите меня.
Сначала я молчать хотела;
Поверьте, моего стыда
Вы не узнали б никогда, Никогда!

I’m writing to you, …and then what?
What else can I say?
I know that it’s in your power to punish me with your contempt!
But if you have at least one grain of pity for my unhappy lot,
you will not abandon me.
At first I wished to remain silent; then, believe me, you would never have known my shame, never!”

О да, клялась я сохранить в душе
Признанье в страсти пылкой и безумной!
Увы! не в силах я владеть своей душой!
Пусть будет то, что быть должно со мной!
Ему признаюсь! Смелей!
Он все узнает!
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

(5he writes.)

„Zachem, zhem vi posetili nas?
V glushi zabito velyenia ya b nikokda ne znala vas, ne znala b gorkovo muchenya.
Dushi neopitnoi volvenya smiriv, so vryemenem, kak znat?
Po syerntsya naslisha bi druga, bila bi vyernaya supruuga
i dobrodyetelnaya mat...”

„Why, oh why did you come to us?
I would never have met you in this remote countryside, nor known this bitter torment.
The excitement of a youthful heart would have calmed with time, who knows?
Most likely I would have found another, and been a faithful wife and virtuous mother...”

Another!
No, not to any other in the world would I have given my heart!
It is decreed on high,
it is the will of heaven: I am yours!
My whole life has been a pledge of this inevitable encounter;
I know this: God sent you to me,
you are my keeper till the grave!
You came to me in my dreams;
as yet unseen, you were already dear,
your wondrous look filled me with longing,
your voice resounded in my heart.

Davno... no, it was not a dream!
Ty chut voshol, ya vmig uznala
Vsyagobomlyela, zapyla,
I v mysllyakh molvila: vot on!
Vot on!

Ne pravda l! Ya tebya slivhala...
Ty govoril so mny v tishi,
Kogda ya bekim pomogala,
Ili molitv oy uslashdala
Tosku dushe?
I v eto samoye mgnovenye
Ne ty, mioloe viewdne,
V prozrachnoi temnoot melkun,
Priniknu tihko k izgolovoy?
Ne ty l s otradoi i lyubovoy
Slova nadezhdzhi mnye shepnl?

I know it! I have heard you ...
Did you not speak to me in the silence,
when I visited the poor, or sought to calm my anguish soul in prayer?
And just this very moment,
was it not you, dear vision, that flashed in the transparent darkness quietly sitting at my bedside?
Wasn’t it you, who joyfully and lovingly whispered words of hope to me?
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

“Who are you? My guardian angel or a cruel tempter?
Put my doubts at rest. Maybe this is all an empty dream, the delusion of an innocent soul, and something else is meant for me?…”

But so be it! From here on I entrust my fate to you; in tears before you, I beg for your protection, I beg you!

Imagine: I am all alone here! No one understands me!
My mind is restless, and I must suffer in silence!
I wait for you, I wait for you!
Say the word to revive my heart’s fondest hopes or wake me from this oppressive dream with, alas, the scorn I have deserved!

It’s done! I can’t read it over, I’m overcome by shame and fright, but I trust your honor and put my fate in your hands!
Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>17</td>
<td>Let me perish, but first let me, with dazzling hope, summon bliss as yet unknown. I’m getting to understand life’s sweetness! I drink the magic potion of desire! I am beset by visions! Everywhere, everywhere I look, I see my fatal tempter! Wherever I look, I see him!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>No, that’s all wrong! I’ll try again! Ah, what’s wrong with me! I’m burning up! I don’t know how to begin!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>“I’m writing to you, …and then what? What else can I say? I know that it’s in your power to punish me with your contempt! But if you have at least one grain of pity for my unhappy lot, you will not abandon me. At first I wished to remain silent; then, believe me, you would never have known my shame, never!”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 20    | O yes, I swore to lock within my breast this declaration of a crazed and ardent passion!
                                 | Alas, I don’t have the strength to control my heart!
                                 | Come what may, whatever happens, I will confess to him! Courage! He will know all! |

Musical Elements
Motif:
- [ ] Solitude
- [ ] Confession of Love
- [ ] Tatiana
- [ ] Onegin
- [x] No motif

Emotional or Dramatic Meaning

Movement and Blocking

| 21    | “Why, oh why did you come to us? I would never have met you in this remote countryside, nor known this bitter torment. The excitement of a youthful heart would have calmed with time, who knows? Most likely I would have found another, and been a faithful wife and virtuous mother...” |

Musical Elements
Motif:
- [ ] Solitude
- [ ] Confession of Love
- [ ] Tatiana
- [ ] Onegin
- [x] No motif

Emotional or Dramatic Meaning

Movement and Blocking

| 22    | Another! No, not to any other in the world would I have given my heart! It is decreed on high, it is the will of heaven: I am yours! My whole life has been a pledge of this inevitable encounter; I know this: God sent you to me, you are my keeper till the grave! |

Musical Elements
Motif:
- [ ] Solitude
- [ ] Confession of Love
- [ ] Tatiana
- [ ] Onegin
- [x] No motif

Emotional or Dramatic Meaning

Movement and Blocking

Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>You appeared before me in my dreams; as yet unseen, you were already dear, your wondrous gaze filled me with longing, your voice resounded in my heart.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>Long ago… no, it was no dream! As soon as you arrived, I recognized you, I almost swooned, began to burn up, and said to myself: It’s him!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>I know it! I have heard you … Did you not speak to me in the silence, when I visited the poor, or sought to calm my anguished soul in prayer? And just this very moment, was it not you, dear vision, that flashed in the transparent darkness quietly standing at my bedside? Wasn’t it you, who joyfully and lovingly whispered words of hope to me?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Musical Elements

- Motif:
  - Solitude
  - Confession of Love
  - Tatiana
  - Onegin
  - No motif

Emotional or Dramatic Meaning

Movement and Blocking
THE MET: LIVE IN HD
EUGENE ONEGIN

CLASSROOM ACTIVITY
Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>“Who are you? My guardian angel or a cruel tempter? Put my doubts at rest. Maybe this is all an empty dream, the delusion of an innocent soul, and something else is meant for me?…”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Musical Elements ____________________________________________________</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
|       | Motif: □ Solitude □ Confession of Love
△ Tatiana □ Onegin □ No motif |
|       | Emotional or Dramatic Meaning________________________________________ |
|       | Movement and Blocking _____________________________________________ |
| 27    | But so be it! From here on I entrust my fate to you; in tears before you, I beg for your protection, I beg you! |
|       | Musical Elements ____________________________________________________ |
|       | Motif: □ Solitude □ Confession of Love
△ Tatiana □ Onegin □ No motif |
|       | Emotional or Dramatic Meaning________________________________________ |
|       | Movement and Blocking _____________________________________________ |
| 28    | Imagine: I am all alone here! No one understands me! My mind is restless, and I must suffer in silence! I wait for you, I wait for you! Say the word to revive my heart’s fondest hopes or wake me from this oppressive dream with, alas, the scorn I have deserved! |
|       | Musical Elements ____________________________________________________ |
|       | Motif: □ Solitude □ Confession of Love
△ Tatiana □ Onegin □ No motif |
|       | Emotional or Dramatic Meaning________________________________________ |
|       | Movement and Blocking _____________________________________________ |
CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

Tatiana’s Musical Confession (CONTINUED)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK</th>
<th>TEXT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>29</td>
<td>It’s done! I can’t read it over, I’m overcome by shame and fright, but I trust your honor and put my fate in your hands!</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Musical Elements

Motif:
- □ Solitude
- □ Confession of Love
- □ Tatiana
- □ Onegin
- □ No motif

Emotional or Dramatic Meaning

Movement and Blocking
At the Met: Decisions, Decisions

Every decision has consequences. Just as in real life, the characters of Eugene Onegin are faced with situations that compel them to choose one path over another. In combination, these choices lead to the opera’s tragic end. One can imagine that if they had made different choices, the story would have ended very differently.

Pick one of these characters to follow throughout the opera: TATIANA  OLGA  ONEGIN  LENSKY.

As you watch the opera, write down the moments in which your character makes a decision. Later, during intermission, begin drafting your “decision tree” to explore what might have happened if your character had done something different. For example:

```
TATIANA
Goes for a walk with Onegin
   No                      Yes
       ↘                        ↘
She never gets to know him     She falls deeply love with him
```

You can continue to record important moments of decision during the second and third acts, and keep building your tree throughout the broadcast. Use your decision tree not only to explore how successive decisions lead to later situations, choices, and outcomes, but also what might have happened if the characters had made different choices.

ACT I
- Decision 1:
- Decision 2:
- Decision 3:

ACT II
- Decision 1:
- Decision 2:
- Decision 3:

ACT III
- Decision 1:
- Decision 2:
- Decision 3:

MY DECISION TREE
Eugene Onegin: My Highs & Lows

APRIL 22, 2017

CONDUCTED BY ROBIN TICCIATI

REVIEWED BY ________________

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>THE STARS</th>
<th>STAR POWER</th>
<th>MY COMMENTS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>ANNA NETREBKO AS TATIANA</td>
<td>*</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DMITRI HVOROSTOVSKY AS ONEGIN</td>
<td>*</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ELENA MAXIMOVA AS OLGA</td>
<td>*</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ALEXEY DOLGOV AS LENSKI</td>
<td>*</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ŠTEFAN KOCÁN AS GREMIN</td>
<td>*</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>THE SHOW, SCENE BY SCENE</th>
<th>ACTION</th>
<th>MUSIC</th>
<th>SET DESIGN/STAGING</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>MADAME LARINA REFLECTS ON DAYS GONE BY MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THE FAMILY’S PEASANTS SING AND DANCE MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A VISIT BY LENSKI AND ONEGIN MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TATIANA POURS OUT HER FEELINGS IN A LETTER MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ONEGIN REJECTS TATIANA MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A CELEBRATION GOES AWRY MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THE DUEL MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ONEGIN RETURNS TO ST. PETERSBURG AND ATTENDS A BALL MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PRINCE GREMIN CONFIDES HIS HAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ONEGIN RECOGNIZES TATIANA MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ONEGIN AND TATIANA MEET ONE LAST TIME MY OPINION OF THIS SCENE:</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
<td>1-2-3-4-5</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>