GIUSEPPE VERDI

LA TRAVIATA

CONDUCTOR
Yannick Nézet-Séguin

PRODUCTION
Michael Mayer

SET DESIGNER
Christine Jones

COSTUME DESIGNER
Susan Hilferty

LIGHTING DESIGNER
Kevin Adams

CHOREOGRAPHER
Lorin Latarro

Opera in three acts
Libretto by Francesco Maria Piave, based on the play La Dame aux Camélias by Alexandre Dumas fils
Saturday, December 15, 2018
1:00–4:00PM

New Production

The production of La Traviata was made possible by a generous gift from The Paiko Foundation

Major additional funding for this production was received from Mercedes T. Bass, Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Montrone, and Rolex

GENERAL MANAGER
Peter Gelb

JEANETTE LERMAN-NEUBAUER
MUSIC DIRECTOR
Yannick Nézet-Séguin
The Metropolitan Opera
2018–19 Season

The 1,015th Metropolitan Opera performance of
GIUSEPPE VERDI’S

LA TRAVIATA

CONDUCTOR
Yannick Nézet-Séguin

IN ORDER OF VOCAL APPEARANCE

VIOLETTA VALÉRY
Diana Damrau

ANNINA
Maria Zifchak

FLORA BERVOIX
Kirstin Chávez

GIUSEPPE
Marco Antonio Jordão

THE MARQUIS D’OBIGNY
Jeongcheol Cha

GIORGIO GERMONT
Quinn Kelsey

BARON DOUPHOL
Dwayne Croft*

A MESSENGER
Ross Benoliel

DR. GRENVIL
Kevin Short

GERMONT’S DAUGHTER
Selin Sahbazoglu

GASTONE
Scott Scully

SOLO DANCERS
Garen Scribner

ALFREDO GERMONT
Juan Diego Flórez

Martha Nichols

This performance is being broadcast live over The Toll Brothers–Metropolitan Opera International Radio Network, sponsored by Toll Brothers, America’s luxury homebuilder®, with generous long-term support from the Annenberg Foundation and GRoW @ Annenberg, The Neubauer Family Foundation, the Vincent A. Stabile Endowment for Broadcast Media, and contributions from listeners worldwide.

Visit List Hall at the first intermission for the Toll Brothers–Metropolitan Opera Quiz.

This performance is also being broadcast live on Metropolitan Opera Radio on SiriusXM channel 75.

Saturday, December 15, 2018, 1:00–4:00PM
This afternoon’s performance is being transmitted live in high definition to movie theaters worldwide.

The Met: Live in HD series is made possible by a generous grant from its founding sponsor, The Neubauer Family Foundation.

Digital support of The Met: Live in HD is provided by Bloomberg Philanthropies.

The Met: Live in HD series is supported by Rolex.

Chorus Master Donald Palumbo
Musical Preparation John Keenan, Yelena Kurdina, Liora Maurer, and Jonathan C. Kelly
Assistant Stage Directors Jonathon Loy, Sarah Ina Meyers, and Kathleen Smith Belcher
Stage Band Conductor Jeffrey Goldberg
Italian Coach Hemdi Kfir
Prompter Yelena Kurdina
Met Titles Sonya Friedman
Assistant Set Designers Brett Banakis, Amelia Cook, and Felicitas Lamenza
Assistant Costume Designers Glenna Jane Ryer and Amanda Whidden
Special Thanks Michaeljon Slinger
Scenery, properties, and electrical props constructed and painted in Metropolitan Opera Shops
Costumes executed by Metropolitan Opera Costume Department and Arel Studio Inc., New York City; Lynne Baccus, New York City; Suitable Costumes LTD, Toronto; Tricorne Inc., New York City
Fabric Printing by Gene Mignola, Inc., Asbury Park, New Jersey Embroidery by Stickerei Müller GMBH, Diespeck, Germany
Wigs and Makeup executed by Metropolitan Opera Wig and Makeup Department

This performance is made possible in part by public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts.
Before the performance begins, please switch off cell phones and other electronic devices.
The Met will be recording and simulcasting audio/video footage in the opera house today. If you do not want us to use your image, please tell a Met staff member.

Met Titles
To activate, press the red button to the right of the screen in front of your seat and follow the instructions provided. To turn off the display, press the red button once again. If you have questions, please ask an usher at intermission.
The Metropolitan Opera is pleased to salute Bank of America in recognition of its generous support during the 2018–19 season.
Synopsis

Act I

In and around Paris during the 19th century. Violetta Valéry knows that she will die soon, exhausted by her restless life as a courtesan. At a party, Gastone introduces Violetta to Alfredo Germont, a young man who has been fascinated with her for a long time. Rumor has it that he has been inquiring after her health every day. His seemingly naïve and emotional attitude amuses the guests, and they ask Alfredo to propose a toast. He celebrates true love, and Violetta responds in praise of unceasing pleasure. As the party moves into the ballroom, Violetta feels faint and stays behind. Only Alfredo remains and declares his love. There is no place for such feelings in her life, Violetta replies, but she gives him a camellia, asking him to return when the flower has faded. He realizes that this means that he will see her again the following day. Alone, Violetta is torn by conflicting emotions—she doesn’t want to give up her way of life, but, at the same time, she feels that Alfredo has awakened her desire to be truly loved.

Intermission (AT APPROXIMATELY 1:35PM)

Act II

Violetta has chosen a life with Alfredo, and they enjoy their love in the country, far from society. When Alfredo finds out that this is only possible because Violetta has been selling her property, he immediately leaves for Paris to procure money. Violetta has received an invitation to a masked ball at Flora’s home, but she no longer cares for such distractions. In Alfredo’s absence, his father, Giorgio Germont, pays her a visit. He demands that she separate from his son, as their relationship threatens his young daughter’s impending marriage. But over the course of their conversation, Germont comes to realize that Violetta is not after his son’s money—she is a woman who loves unselfishly. He appeals to Violetta’s generosity of spirit and explains that, from a bourgeois point of view, her liaison with Alfredo has no future. Violetta’s resistance dwindles, and she finally agrees to leave Alfredo forever. Only after her death shall he learn the truth about why she returned to her old life. She accepts the invitation to the ball and writes a goodbye letter to her lover. Alfredo returns, and Violetta tearfully hurries away. Soon after, a messenger delivers Violetta’s letter, and while Alfredo is reading it, his father appears. He exhorts his son to return to their native land, but all the memories of home and a happy family can’t prevent the furious and jealous Alfredo from seeking revenge for Violetta’s apparent betrayal.

At the masked ball, news has spread of Violetta and Alfredo’s separation. Eventually, Alfredo arrives, followed soon after by Violetta and her new lover, Baron Douphol. Alfredo and the baron battle at the gaming table, and Alfredo wins a fortune: lucky at cards, unlucky in love. When everybody has withdrawn,
Alfredo confronts Violetta, who claims to be truly in love with the baron. In his rage, Alfredo calls the guests as witnesses and declares that he now repays Violetta for her time with him, throwing his winnings at her. She collapses in shock. Giorgio Germont, who has witnessed the scene, rebukes his now-penitent son for his behavior. Violetta says that, one day, Alfredo will understand her actions.

Intermission (AT APPROXIMATELY 3:10PM)

Act III

Back in her home in Paris, Violetta is dying. Her last remaining friend, Dr. Grenvil, knows that she has only a few more hours to live. Alfredo’s father has written to Violetta, informing her that his son was not injured in his duel with Douphol. Full of remorse, Germont has told his son about Violetta’s sacrifice. Alfredo wants to rejoin her as soon as possible. Violetta is afraid that he might be too late. The sound of celebrations is heard outside while she is in mortal agony. Alfredo finally arrives, and though their reunion fills Violetta with renewed joy, she realizes that even his return is not enough to save her. Giorgio Germont arrives, and as death approaches, Violetta bids Alfredo to keep her memory alive. Suddenly, all sorrow and suffering seem to miraculously leave her—a final illusion, before death claims her.
In Focus

Giuseppe Verdi

La Traviata

Premiere: Venice, Teatro la Fenice, 1853

Verdi’s La Traviata survived a notoriously unsuccessful opening night to become one of the best-loved operas in the repertoire. Following the larger-scale dramas of Rigoletto and Il Trovatore, its intimate scope and subject matter inspired the composer to create some of his most profound and heartfelt music. The title role of the “fallen woman” has captured the imaginations of audiences and performers alike with its inexhaustible vocal and dramatic possibilities—and challenges. Violetta is considered a pinnacle of the soprano repertoire.

The Creators

In a remarkable career spanning six decades in the theater, Giuseppe Verdi (1813–1901) composed 28 operas, at least half of which are at the core of today’s repertoire. His role in Italy’s cultural and political development has made him an icon in his native country. Francesco Maria Piave (1810–1876), Verdi’s librettist for La Traviata, collaborated with him on ten works, including Ernani, Rigoletto, La Forza del Destino, and the original versions of Macbeth and Simon Boccanegra. Alexandre Dumas fils (1824–1895) was the son of the author of The Three Musketeers. His play La Dame aux Camélias (The Lady of the Camellias), which Verdi adapted into La Traviata, is based on Dumas’s own, semi-autobiographical novel of the same name.

The Setting

With La Traviata, Verdi and Piave fashioned an opera from a play set in contemporary times—an anomaly in the composer’s long career. Dumas’s La Dame aux Camélias was a meditation on (and reinterpretation of) the author’s youthful affair with the celebrated courtesan Marie Duplessis, known as a sophisticated and well-read woman whose charms and tact far surpassed her station.

The Music

Verdi’s musical-dramatic ability to portray the individual in a marginalized relationship to society keeps this work a mainstay on the world’s stages—according to popular lore, for the last one hundred years, there has been at least one performance of La Traviata somewhere in the world every single night. The vocal and emotional scope of the title character is enormous: Compare the defiant fireworks in the Act I show-stopper aria “Sempre libera degg’io” to the haunting regret of Act III’s “Addio, del passato.” The dramatic demands continue in Violetta’s interactions with others, most notably in the extended Act II confrontation with her lover’s father, Germont. Often cited as the emotional core of La Traviata, it is one of the most resoundingly truthful scenes in opera. Germont embodies the double-faced morality of the bourgeoisie, and Violetta’s interactions with him parallel her precarious dealings with society in general. She begins with defiance, becomes desperate, and finishes defeated. It is a vast journey within a single scene.

Met History
La Traviata was first performed at the Met within a month of the company’s opening in 1883 but then was retired during a subsequent all-German period. After returning to the schedule in 1892, it has since been performed more than a thousand times. The company introduced notable productions in 1921, designed by architectural legend Joseph Urban; 1935, choreographed by George Balanchine; 1957, directed by Tyrone Guthrie; and 1966, directed by Alfred Lunt. Franco Zeffirelli created two stagings for the company, one in 1989 and another in 1998. On New Year’s Eve 2010, the most recent production, by Willy Decker, had its premiere. The roster of artists who have appeared in the opera’s three principal roles at the Met reads like a who’s who of generations of great singers. Licia Albanese holds the record for the most performances of the role at the Met (87), followed by American beauty Anna Moffo (80) and Spanish femme fatale Lucrezia Bori (58). Renée Fleming, Angela Gheorghiu, Natalie Dessay, Marina Rebeka, and Sonya Yoncheva have been among the notable recent interpreters of this timeless role. On December 4, 2018, Yannick Nézet-Séguin—in his first performance as the Met’s Jeanette Lerman-Neubauer Music Director—led the premiere of a new staging by Michael Mayer, which stars Diana Damrau in the title role, Juan Diego Flórez as Alfredo, and Quinn Kelsey as Germont.
Verdi was still working on Il Trovatore when he began La Traviata in 1852, and they are as different as chalk from cheese. The three great operas (Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, and La Traviata) that mark his mid-century maturation all feature more complex and colorful orchestration and a more advanced tonal language, but each is molded to its individual dramatic requirements. In La Traviata, the result is an appealing intimacy of tone, an exploration in music of the vulnerable human heart.

But in 1851, when the composer was first approached about an opera for the 1853 carnival season at the Teatro la Fenice, he dragged his feet and set conditions. He wanted a “donna di prima forza,” or bravura soprano (not at all suitable for the future Violetta), before he would put pen to paper, and he was picky about the story: “I don’t want any of these ordinary subjects which crop up by the hundreds,” he wrote. Eventually, after several rejected suggestions, Verdi found his inspiration: Alexandre Dumas fils’s play (adapted from that author’s earlier novel of the same name) La Dame aux Camélias. On New Year’s Day 1853, Verdi wrote to his friend Cesare De Sanctis, saying, “For Venice I’m doing La Dame aux Camélias which will probably be called La Traviata [The Fallen Woman]. A subject for our own age. Another composer wouldn’t have done it because of the costumes, the period and a thousand other silly scruples. But I’m writing it with the greatest of pleasure.”

A subject for the age, indeed: In the wake of the French Revolution and the Napoleonic Wars, a newly heterogeneous, parvenu Parisian society indulged in hedonism of every kind. The bourgeoisie claimed its right to privileges formerly reserved for the elite, and men and women alike were on the make. By the mid-century, prostitution was linked to the concept of modernity as part of burgeoning social mobility and opportunism in cities, far from the moral strictures in country villages. As Dumas fils observed in his 1842 Streetwalkers, Lorettes [middle-class kept women], and Courtesans, it was more profitable for a lower-class girl than factory work or shoplifting. If there was misery aplenty for lowly streetwalkers, the courtesans often lived lives of luxury. The real-life inspiration for Violetta was named Marie Duplessis, and she was the mistress of, among others, Count Ferdinand Montguyon, Antoine Agenor de Guiche, the elderly Baltic-German Count Gustav Ernst von Stackelberg, and Count Edouard de Perregaux, who eventually married her. She died in February 1847, at age 23, of tuberculosis.

Dumas had an affair in 1844–45 with Duplessis that ended badly. In a mixture of myth and the transformation of real life, he wrote his novel La Dame aux Camélias in 1848, then turned it into a drama in 1852. In the play, Dumas toned down the promiscuity of Marguerite (as Duplessis’s stand-in was named), deleted the red camellia that was her code for menstruation and hence unavailability for love-making (the white camellia had the opposite meaning), and made her kinder, more loving, than her earlier incarnation. If Verdi and his librettist Francesco Maria Piave are faithful to the play in many respects, they carry the idealization of their heroine Violetta Valéry much farther than Dumas did, and the results of their shared labors are greater by far than either the novel or the play.

For the premiere at La Fenice in 1853, Verdi argued for contemporary costumes and stage sets (“No wigs!,” he insisted) but did not get his way. The opera was set back in time (ca. 1700), and the role of Violetta was sung by one Fanny Salvini-Donatelli, whose participation Verdi furiously opposed. Thirty-eight years old and stout, she did not make a convincing picture of a young consumptive; Verdi had requested a singer “with an elegant figure who is young and sings passionately.” The fact that Germont was sung by Felice Varesi, not in prime voice at the end of his career, did not help either; he was replaced by Filippo Coletti in the revised version that followed in 1854. For the new staging, Verdi chose Maria Spezia, 13 years younger than Salvini-Donatelli and much slimmer.

In Verdi’s music, Violetta is at the center of it all from the beginning: Take, for example, the divided high strings that bespeak her frailty in the opening orchestral prelude and the violins’ lyrical melody that follows, evocative of her grace and sweetness. But she is also part of a glittering social scene. The music we hear in the beginning is borrowed in part from Verdi’s 1841 opera Oberto, Conte di San Bonifacio, and it showcases Violetta’s charming coquetry. When the partygoers call for a brindisi (drinking song), Alfredo obliges with one of the opera’s most famous numbers, “Libiamo ne’ lieti calici,” to which Violetta responds in kind. Waltzes by the banda (the stage band playing music that the characters hear) are punctuated by Violetta’s spell of faintness and Alfredo’s concern. His declaration of love comes in the Act I duet, “Un di felice, eterea,” remarkable for its directness of expression and its chamber-music quality. A similar intimacy marks his pizzicato-accompanied lyrical song “De’ miei bollenti spiriti” at the start of Act II, although a fiery and conventional cabaletta, “Oh mio rimorso!” follows. When the partygoers depart the first act, Violetta sings the renowned cavatina-cabaletta paired arias that tell of her divided soul: the tender, loving creature who wants to believe the ardent young man (“Ah fors’è lui”) and the pleasure-loving cocotte who would be “Sempre libera” (“Always free”), set to some of the most giddily febrile coloratura ever created.

The duet between Germont and Violetta in Act II is the heart of the opera. Here, Verdi moves from recitative (more speech-like) through arioso (a melodic style midway between recitative and aria) to the duet proper, beginning with Germont’s “Pura siccome un angelo” and proceeding through seven sections in which Violetta traverses almost every tragic emotion possible. By the end of this complex scene, Germont has come to understand Violetta’s true love for his son. He will display that understanding at the end of the act.
in the big ensemble finale, its climax the moment of outrage when Alfredo vents his unwarranted contempt for Violetta by throwing his winnings at her. The swooning and gradual, agonized revival of an unjustly accused heroine prompts what the scholar Julian Budden named “the groundswell effect,” or the final emphatic passage in the slow concerted ensemble section of the finale. The father’s sorrowful nobility, Alfredo’s shame and confusion, and Violetta’s pathos are each distinct in this ensemble, which ends with the kind of lyrical transfiguration we expect from Verdi at such moments.

The divisi violins and the theme from the opera’s opening bars return for the sick-room scene in Act III. Violetta reads Germont’s letter, in which he promises to come see her, aloud, accompanied by tremolo solo strings and a melody for the violins. (Hollywood recognized the strength of this dramatic device and has borrowed it for many a movie.) In the dying Violetta’s exquisite farewell to bygone days (“Addio, del passato”), the insistent pathos of the off-beat accents is evocative of sobbing. The instant when minor mode cedes to major mode is magical—but it cannot last. The Mardi Gras carnival chorus (“Largo al quadrupede”) might be musically banal in the manner of all “carny music,” but the contrast with Violetta’s private agony is an undeniable coup de théâtre. The duet for Violetta and Alfredo that follows (“Parigi, o cara”) returns us to the archetypal Traviata music in its sweet simplicity: This is the novelty of this opera. When Violetta tells Alfredo that if his return cannot restore her to health, nothing can prevent her from dying, the restraint of this quiet phrase, accompanied only by strings, is remarkable, more affecting than any breast-beating fury could possibly be. The lovers’ despairing shared cabaletta (“Ah! Gran Dio! morir si giovane”) leads to Germont’s entrance; he is now ready to claim Violetta as his daughter. The death-scene, with its massed ensemble, is notable for an economy of scale that only magnifies its heartbreaking effect.

After a French revival of this opera in 1864 by impresario Léon Carvalho, Verdi was asked which of his operas thus far he liked best. He replied, “Speaking as a professional, Rigoletto, speaking as an amateur, La Traviata.” Thereafter, this composer, who both adhered to Italy’s operatic traditions and reinvented them throughout his long life, would avail himself of French grand opera traits, but La Traviata is sui generis in the way it speaks to the heart. No wonder that the “amateur” Verdi loved it, and so do we.

—Susan Youens

Susan Youens is the J. W. Van Gorkom Professor of Music at the University of Notre Dame and has written eight books on the music of Franz Schubert and Hugo Wolf.
The Cast and Creative Team

Yannick Nézet-Séguin
CONDUCTOR (MONTREAL, CANADA)

This season La Traviata, Pelléas et Mélisande, and Dialogues des Carmélites at the Met; and concerts with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Montreal’s Orchestre Métropolitain, Berlin Philharmonic, Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra, and Met Orchestra at Carnegie Hall.

Met appearances Elektra, Parsifal, Der Fliegende Holländer, Otello, Don Carlo, Rusalka, La Traviata, Faust, and Carmen (debut, 2009).

Career highlights He is in his first season as the Met’s Jeanette Lerman-Neubauer Music Director. He is music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra (2012) and artistic director and principal conductor of the Orchestre Métropolitain (OM) (2000). In 2018, he became honorary conductor of the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra, where he was music director for ten seasons, and in 2016, he was named an honorary member of the Chamber Orchestra of Europe (COE). Between 2008 and 2014, he was principal guest conductor of the London Philharmonic Orchestra. His operatic credits include Die Zauberflöte, La Clemenza di Tito, Le Nozze di Figaro, Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Così fan tutte, and Don Giovanni in concert in Baden-Baden, most of them with the COE; Parsifal in concert with the OM; Lohengrin and Der Fliegende Holländer at the Vienna State Opera; Rusalka at Covent Garden; and Roméo et Juliette at the Salzburg Festival and La Scala.

Michael Mayer
DIRECTOR (BETHESDA, MARYLAND)

This season La Traviata and Marnie at the Met and Burn This on Broadway.

Met productions Rigoletto (debut, 2013).

Career highlights Among his numerous accolades are Tony, Drama Desk, and Outer Critics Circle Awards for Spring Awakening and Tony nominations for Hedwig and the Angry Inch, Thoroughly Modern Millie (for which he also won a Drama Desk Award), You’re a Good Man, Charlie Brown, and A View from the Bridge. Additional Broadway credits include Head Over Heels, The Terms of My Surrender, On a Clear Day You Can See Forever, Everyday Rapture, and American Idiot (for which he won a Drama Desk Award), among many others. Off Broadway, he has directed Whorl Inside a Loop (with Dick Scanlan), The Illusion, Love, Love, Love, 10 Million Miles, Antigone in New York, Baby Anger, The Credeaux Canvas, and Stupid Kids, and his productions have also appeared at Berkeley Repertory Theatre, La Jolla Playhouse, McCarter Theatre Center, Center Stage, and Yale Repertory Theatre. His work for the screen includes the films The Seagull, Flicka, and A Home at the End of the World, and the television shows Alpha House and Smash.
Christine Jones
SET DESIGNER (NEW YORK, NEW YORK)

THIS SEASON  La Traviata at the Met and The Cher Show on Broadway.

MET PRODUCTIONS  Rigoletto (debut, 2013).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  She is artistic director of Theatre for One and a member of the faculty of New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts. Among her numerous accolades are Tony and Olivier Awards for Harry Potter and the Cursed Child, a Tony Award for American Idiot, a Drama Desk Award for Queen of the Night, and an Obie Award for Sustained Excellence in Set Design. Additional Broadway credits include Old Times, Hands on a Hardbody, On a Clear Day You Can See Forever, Everyday Rapture, Spring Awakening, and The Green Bird. In the West End, she has designed productions of Close to You, Let the Right One In, and Spring Awakening. Her operatic credits include Laurent Petitgirard’s John Merrick, The Elephant Man at Minnesota Opera, Lucia di Lammermoor at New York City Opera, and Giulio Cesare at Houston Grand Opera. Her work has also appeared at Lincoln Center Festival, Shakespeare in the Park, New York Theatre Workshop, Signature Theatre, and the Jane Street Theatre, among others.

Susan Hilferty
COSTUME DESIGNER (ARLINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS)

THIS SEASON  La Traviata at the Met.

MET PRODUCTIONS  Rigoletto (debut, 2013).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  She has designed more than 300 productions in the U.S., U.K., Japan, Australia, Germany, and South Africa. She received Tony, Drama Desk, and Outer Critics Circle Awards and an Olivier Award nomination for Wicked. Additional Broadway credits include Present Laughter (Tony and Drama Desk Award nominations), Hands on a Hardbody, Annie, Spring Awakening (Tony Award nomination), Lestat (Tony Award nomination), Assassins, and Into the Woods (Hewes Design Award; Tony and Drama Desk Award nominations), among many others. Her operatic credits include Manon at LA Opera and Staatsoper Berlin, Mozart’s La Finta Giardiniera at Washington National Opera and the Glimmerglass Festival, and Káťa Kabánová at Opera Theatre of Saint Louis. She has also designed for Taylor Swift’s Speak Now World Tour, Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, and Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Her many awards include an Obie Award for Sustained Excellence in Design, the Helen Hayes Award for Outstanding Set Design, and the Ruth Morley Design Award from the League of Professional Theatre Women.
Kevin Adams
LIGHTING DESIGNER (PANHANDLE, TEXAS)

THIS SEASON  La Traviata and Marnie at the Met and The Cher Show on Broadway.
MET PRODUCTIONS  Kaija Saariaho’s L’Amour de Loin and Rigoletto (debut, 2013).
CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  He received Tony Awards for his work on Hedwig and the Angry Inch, American Idiot, The 39 Steps (for which he also won a Drama Desk Award), and Spring Awakening. Other Broadway credits include Head Over Heels, SpongeBob Squarepants, The Terms of My Surrender, Hands on a Hardbody, Next to Normal, Man and Boy, and Hair, among many others, as well as solo shows for John Leguizamo and Eve Ensler. His off-Broadway credits include Carrie, Rent, The Scottsboro Boys, and new works by Tony Kushner, Edward Albee, Terrence McNally, Christopher Durang, Neil Simon, Richard Greenberg, Eric Bogosian, and Anna Deveare Smith. He designed the world premiere of Marnie at English National Opera, and his work has also appeared at the Glimmerglass Festival, New York City Opera, Houston Grand Opera, Canadian Opera Company, Washington National Opera, and in the HBO film Mildred Pierce. He is the recipient of numerous honors, including Obie, Lucille Lortel, and Outer Critics Circle Awards.

Lorin Latarro
CHOREOGRAPHER (NEW YORK, NEW YORK)

THIS SEASON  La Traviata for her debut at the Met, Waitress and Home Street Home in the West End, Merrily We Roll Along at Roundabout Theatre Company, and the world premiere of Poul Ruders’s The Thirteenth Child at the Santa Fe Opera.
CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  Broadway choreography includes Waitress, Les Liaisons Dangereuses, and Waiting For Godot, and associate choreography for American Idiot and The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time. She choreographed Chess at the Kennedy Center, Twelfth Night at the Delacorte Theater, and Heart of Rock and Roll at the Old Globe, and she served as associate choreographer for Rigoletto at the Met. Her work has also appeared at the Public Theater, Berkeley Repertory Theatre, Juilliard Opera, Brooklyn Academy of Music, New York City Center, Drury Lane Theatre, and Signature Theatre, among many others. She is an associate artist at Bucks County Playhouse and has received two Drama Desk Awards. As a performer, she made her Broadway debut in Swing!, appeared in 14 Broadway productions, and danced in companies Martha Graham, Twyla Tharp, Robert Wilson, and MOMIX. She is a graduate of the Juilliard School.
THIS SEASON  Violetta in La Traviata at the Met, Ophélie in Hamlet in concert in Barcelona and at Deutsche Oper Berlin, and Marguerite in Faust at Covent Garden.

MET APPEARANCES  Since her 2005 debut as Zerbinetta in Ariadne auf Naxos, she has sung more than 125 performances in 17 roles, including Elvira in I Puritani, Juliette in Roméo et Juliette, Leila in Les Pêcheurs de Perles, the title roles of Manon and Lucia di Lammermoor, Amina in La Sonnambula, Violetta, Gilda in Rigoletto, Adina in L’Elisir d’Amore, Rosina in Il Barbiere di Siviglia, and Countess Adèle in Le Comte Ory.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  In 2007, she was named a Kammersängerin of the Bavarian State Opera, where her roles have included Violetta, Lucia, Antonio/Giulietta/Stella in Les Contes d’Hoffmann, and the Countess in Le Nozze di Figaro, among others. Recent performances include the title role of Maria Stuarda in Zurich and in concert at Deutsche Oper Berlin, Antonio/Stella at LA Opera, and the Countess at La Scala. She has also appeared at the Vienna State Opera, Paris Opera, Salzburg Festival, Spain’s Castell de Peralada Festival, and in numerous cities throughout Europe and Asia.

Juan Diego Flórez
TENOR (LIMA, PERU)

THIS SEASON  Alfredo in La Traviata at the Met; Edgardo in Lucia di Lammermoor, des Grieux in Manon, and Count Almaviva in Il Barbiere di Siviglia at the Vienna State Opera; des Grieux in concert in Paris; and concert and recital appearances in Buenos Aires, Graz, London, Wolfsburg, Barcelona, and Valladolid.

MET APPEARANCES  Giacomo V in La Donna del Lago, Don Ramiro in La Cenerentola, the title role of Le Comte Ory, Nemorino in L’Elisir d’Amore, Tonio in La Fille du Régiment, Elvino in La Sonnambula, Count Almaviva (debut, 2002), Ernesto in Don Pasquale, and Lindoro in L’Italiana in Algeri.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  Recent performances include Ricciardo in Ricciardo e Zoraide at Pesaro’s Rossini Opera Festival; the Duke in Rigoletto, Roméo in Roméo et Juliette, and Elvino at the Vienna State Opera; Gennaro in Donizetti’s Lucrezia Borgia and Edgardo at the Bavarian State Opera; Orphée in Orphée et Eurydice at La Scala; Hoffmann in Les Contes d’Hoffmann in Monte Carlo; Vilfredo d’Ivanhoe in Nicolai’s Il Templario and Gennaro in concert at the Salzburg Festival; the title role of Werther in Zurich and Bologna; and Raoul de Nangis in Meyerbeer’s Les Huguenots at Deustche Oper Berlin.

Visit metopera.org
Quinn Kelsey
BARITONE (HONOLULU, HAWAII)

THIS SEASON  Germont in La Traviata and Amonasro in Aida at the Met, the title role of Rigoletto in Zurich, Ford in Falstaff at the Dallas Opera, Germont at the Hawaii Opera Theatre, and Enrico in Lucia di Lammermoor at the Bavarian State Opera.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS  Recent performances include Germont in Zurich; Rodrigo in Don Carlo at Washington National Opera; Rigoletto at Lyric Opera of Chicago, San Francisco Opera, and in Frankfurt; Amonasro in Orange; Count di Luna at Covent Garden; and Enrico at Lyric Opera of Chicago. He has also sung Rigoletto the Paris Opera, Santa Fe Opera, English National Opera, and in concert at the Hawaii Opera Theatre; Germont at Covent Garden, the Canadian Opera Company, San Francisco Opera, and Lyric Opera of Chicago; Enrico in Frankfurt; Count di Luna at Lyric Opera of Chicago; and the title role of Falstaff at Japan’s Seiji Ozawa Matsumoto Festival. He was the 2015 recipient of the Met’s Beverly Sills Artist Award, established by Agnes Varis and Karl Leichtman.